TAMWORTH FAIR

The fall show at Tamworth on Friday and Saturday last, was a success in every particular, notwithstanding the fact that the morning of Saturday was ushered in amidst a heavy down pour of rain, which no doubt kept a great many from attending the fair. On the afternoon of Friday, besides the horse races, a baseball match was played, Marlbank and Tamworth being the contesting teams. Tamworth won by a score of 18-16. The following are the results of the races :

Gettin' Wisdom

is a comparatively easy task if you start it while you are young. Don't allow your children's eyes to be ruined for all time because "they look too 'ded' with glasses on."

We'll tell you the truth as to whether they need glasses or not, and charge you nothing for the telling.

Headaches in children are suspicious. We are also the best people to guarantee the quality of our frames, it being part of our jewelry business to acquire that ability and knowledge.

Users of package dyes will please bear in mind that vile and worthless imitations of Diamond Dyes are sold by some dealers. Every time you purchased dyes be sure you ask for the "DIAMOND." TOO SOON THE END WILL COME

Promise of Broader Life in the Death of Summer

How great is the goodness which Thou hast stored for those that reverence Thee.—Psalms xxxi. 19.

This morning I chanced to hear a few bars of "The Lost Chord." The theme is one that touches every heart, for every heart has lost some sweet harmony.

Autumn's more sober colors are replacing the radiance of spring and the strength of summer. The leaves are changing hue. The evenings draw in; the breezes murmur the first whispers which tell us that nature's life is waning. But too soon the end will come. That end we call death—nature's death. Year after year the same story is retold. Springtide's tender leaves of hope, summer blossoms, autumn harvests, these spell beauty, joy, prosperity. Winter blasts and shrouds and fetters spell—what? The reverse of beauty and joy and prosperity. No—emphatically no.

All is beautiful in God's creation. The echo of the winter blast is the rustling of the golden grain in

THE COMING SEASON.

From under this shroud of snow will spring the growths which mean man's joy. And the fetters of ice are but prophetic of harvests which build prosperity.

What holds good in nature around us holds good in our own human lives. The springtide of life, with its tender leaves of hope, its buds of promise, its dreams and happiness and beauty, its visions of success and prosperity, passes away.

Then in the summertime of our existence we begin to realize that things are not what they seem, but the disappointments, the defeats, the tangles, the strains and the stress shall be found to mean the strengthening of our own character, the development of our own possibilities for better things, leading to the harvesting in life's autumn of all that is worth harvesting—the wisdom, the experiences, the growths and fragrances of tried love and the blossoms and fruits of tested friendship.

Let the autumn come, even though the beauty is so different from the vigorous and glowing and promising beauty of earlier days. When at last we will behold the great goodness which God has stored for us we will have learned to have faith in God's workings. We will have discovered gratitude for God's blessings. We will have made amends for our shortcomings and we will be calmed by our hope

FOR GOD'S SALVATION.

These are notes of the perfect chord—to most of us on earth a lost chord. We hear its far-off sounds more plainly; its melody is restored to our memories when our ripened years remind us that death, God's ingathering, is at hand. That divine ingathering will mean that He will, with His hand and with His power, with His wisdom and with His alchemy, gather in, weave, merge and transmute all the sorrows and tangles, all the lost hopes, faded visions, foiled efforts, all the bereavements and pains and trials of life, into something new and beautiful and wonderful, even as He transmutes the desolation of winter, its blasts, its snow shrouds and its icy fetters, into the beauty of spring, the radiance of summer, the harvests of the autumn.

of challenging to combat. The term thus "describes the spirit of defiance which animated rival parties amid the heated atmosphere of religious controversy."

7. God is not mocked—God's judgment is unerring and sure, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

8. The crowning fruit of the guidance of the Holy Spirit is the inheritance of eternal life.

RESURRECTION FLOWER

SAID TO HAVE BEEN DISCOVERED BY RUSSIAN BOTANIST.

Comes to Life Again Though Apparently Dead When Moistened With Water.

That mysterious blossom of which only one specimen has ever been found, and that which that great naturalist, Humboldt, obliged to own that he knew nothing like it in nature, named "the flower of the Resurrection," it will be remembered by those of us old enough to recall 1848, writes a correspondent of the London Globe, was brought to Europe by Dr. Deck, who had gone to Nubia on a shooting expedition. He bequeathed it to his friend Lannion, who bestowed on Humboldt one of the two flowers on the plant which Dr. Deck brought back.

This flower possessed the remarkable power of coming to life again though apparently dead when moistened with a little water, blossoming afresh as if just at its apogee of beauty. This was not a variation of the Indian man-

THE BRITISH OFFICER

HIS MENTAL, PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS CAPACITY.

Many Things He Should Know But Falls In Usually in Time of Need.

In view of the recent report of the South African War Stores Commission, with its severe strictures on the mental, professional and business capacity of the British officer, it may be of general interest to review briefly a few of the miscellaneous accomplishments in which the average subaltern is expected to excel, says the London Daily Graphic.

Apart from the study entailed by the particular branch of the service to which the subaltern belongs there are numerous courses of instruction about which the long suffering taxpayer knows little or nothing. Many of these courses are compulsory, and together with the voluntary ones they occupy the greater portion of the initial stages of a subaltern's career.

After a few months' service he proceeds to Hythe, where he learns the theory and practice of musketry, the history of firearms and the mechanism of the rifles and machine guns of all nations. Later, at Aldershot, he is taught signalling with flag, lamp, heliograph and semaphore, and afterward, at the veterinary school, he learns the structure and diseases of the horse, the care of the animal in health and its treatment when sick, how to forge its shoes and nail them on, how to fit saddlery and harness, and the construction of stables and management of animals both

ON LAND AND SHIPBOARD.

He then qualifies as a transport officer, receiving instruction in the details of manufacture and care of all army vehicles from the water cart to the gun carriage. A knowledge of motor cars and traction engines has recently been added to the curriculum. Afterward he is taught how to judge the quality of forage, and he often has to compete with the farmer and professional buyer in the purchase of hay and straw by the rick from the meadow, or oats by the shipload from Mark Lane.

In order that the soldiers' food shall be the best obtainable (at a price), the officer has to be instructed in the quality of flour and meat (dead and alive), and he also has to be conversant with the arts of breadmaking and butchery. Likewise the signs of age, health or disease in cattle and sheep and the quality of groceries, as well as beer, wines, spirits and milk, must be learned if he wishes to gain a "supply certificate."

At Chatham he is taught to make trenches, temporary bridges and military obstacles, and to draw maps, write reports and "observe" the stars. There, too, he is shown how to survey an enemy's country from the giddy heights of a balloon, or to approach his fortresses by means of underground tunnels; and he may, if he be so inclined, be trained at the local gymnasium as a boxer, a fencer, a gymnast, or an exponent of jiu-jitsu; and—having achieved all these qualifications—he can crown his ambition by graduating as a chef at the Aldershot school of cookery.

Advantage is taken of his linguistic abilities to send him to Japan for two years to study Japanese, and he is likewise encouraged to qualify as an interpreter in as many languages as he has a fancy for, from Chinese to German and from Hindustani to Cape Dutch.

Every British officer is now supposed to know how to render

"FIRST AID TO THE WOUNDED"

and how to bandage, splint and prescribe for minor ailments, and he is even expected to be a master of phonetics and an essayist on subjects varying from the report of a cricket match to the HOME.

SOME DAINTY RECIPES.

Stale Cake, with the addition of thin custard, makes an excellent boiled pudding. Serve sweet sauce with this.

Fried Vegetable Marrow.—Stew a vegetable marrow in weak stock, then drain thoroughly and stamp into neat rounds; drain quite dry. Dip into seasoned egg and breadcrumbs and fry a golden-brown color. Serve piled on a d'oyley with grated cheese scattered.

Sweet Croutons.—Cut some neat little rounds of bread about one inch and a half thick and scoop out a part of the centre. Soak for a few minutes in sweetened and flavored milk, drain slightly, and fry in batter to a golden color. Fill the hole in each with preserve, sift caster sugar over, and serve.

A lamb chop to be in perfection should be cut one inch and a half thick and be cooked well, for underdone lamb, like veal, is unwholesome and unpalatable. The correct cut for a lamb chop is from the loin, and most of the fat should be removed before cooking. Just as you serve the chop, put on it a lump of butter which has chopped parsley and mint worked into it.

Cheese Salad.—Salads are always popular, and any novelty in serving them is appreciated. Arrange this salad in a bowl, using lettuce, watercress, etc., and then make a good mayonnaise sauce. Take some cream cheese and pound it in a mortar, moistening it by degrees with the mayonnaise. When thoroughly amalgamated pour over the salad, garnish with tomatoes or radishes, and serve.

Oporto Rice.—Swell some well washed and dried rice in plenty of milk, then add sugar to taste and let all cook gently till the milk is all but absorbed; add two ounces of blanched and roughly chopped almonds. Place the rice in a deep china dish, shaking it till the rice lies level, sprinkle it with cinnamon and serve with thick cream on the top. Do not hurry the cooking of the rice if you wish the dish to be at its best.

Chocolate Icing.—Place in a saucepan a quarter of a pound of icing or caster sugar, one ounce of grated chocolate and a tablespoonful of water, or a little more if necessary. Stir all over a moderate fire until the icing becomes as thick as cream. Lay this evenly on a cake with a knife, which should be dipped occasionally into boiling water. When finished place in a cool oven for a few minutes.

An Inexpensive Veal Dish.—Dredge a knuckle of veal thickly with flour, dissolve two ounces of best dripping in a stewpan, add the veal and cook till brown, turning constantly. Nearly cover the meat with stock, season with a blade of mace, and onion stuck with cloves, and the juice and rind of half a lemon. Cover the stewpan and simmer its contents for two and a half hours. Strain the gravy, thicken it with browned flour and pour over the meat.

Roast Ham.—This must first be boiled, and longer time must be allowed than if it might remain in its liquor to cool. When tender take off the rind and trim the ham neatly. Place it in a baking tin with sufficient liquor to come halfway up the ham, cover it with a piece of greased paper, let it get very hot in the oven for about half an hour, then send into table nicely glazed or covered with brown crumbs and garnished with vegetables. Broad beans, peas, spinach, and brussels-sprouts are particularly suitable for handing with this dish.

Dutch Rabbits.—Take a nice fresh young rabbit, soak it in salted water for an hour, drain dry; wipe it in a clean cloth and lard with strips of sliced bacon on the back. Truss the rabbit into a neat shape and put in a baking pan, pour over a cupful of water,

Lesson XIV. Temperance Lesson.

Golden Text: Prov. 20. 1.

THE LESSON WORD STUDIES.

Note.—The text of the Revised Version is used as a basis for these Word Studies.

The Epistle to the Galatians.—The Pauline authorship of the epistle to the Galatians has never been doubted, although the time and place of its writing cannot be determined with absolute certainty. The probability is that it is to be counted among the earliest of the Pauline writings, and that its author addressed it to the Galatian churches from Ephesus, probably about A.D. 57-58. The churches to which it was sent were composed largely of Gentile members. They had been founded by Paul himself. The purpose and content of the epistle has been briefly and well stated by Frederic Rendall in the Expositor's Greek Testament, as follows: "The Galatian epistle was evoked by an insidious attack on the Christian freedom of Greek churches, and its tone is thoroughly controversial. It insists on the futility of seeking justification by obedience to the law, it judges that Jewish Christians have all confessed themselves guilty sinners, and owe to Christ their redemption from the curses of the law; it establishes the provisional character of the Sinaitic dispensation, and reduces it to a mere preparatory discipline, destined for an age of spiritual obedience to the law, it judges that Jewish Christians have all confessed themselves guilty sinners, and owe to Christ their redemption from the curses of the law; it establishes the provisional character of the Sinaitic dispensation, and reduces it to a mere preparatory discipline designed for an age of spiritual childhood and wholly unfit for Christians, seeing they have attained to spiritual manhood; it dwells on the bondage of Israel after the flesh, and identifies unbelieving Jews with Ishmael in their present temper and future destiny." Chapters 1 to 4 inclusive are devoted to this controversial doctrinal teaching, discussing and illustrating the principle of justification by faith. In chapters 5 and 6 the apostle gives some practical exhortations based on this preceding doctrinal teaching, and exhorts the Galatians to stand fast in the higher liberty which they have attained through faith. He further points out that this liberty must not be abused, since it is not an exemption from law, but a fulfilling of the law in love to one's neighbor. At this point in the exhortation of the apostle our lesson begins.

Verse 15. Bite and devour—Strong figurative expressions of partisan hatred and strife.

Consumed one of another—The inevitable result of discord in a Christian community, if long continued, is the dissolution of the community itself. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

16. Walk—Order your conduct.
By the Spirit—Guided by same. A higher life principle than carnal desires is to control the conduct of a Christian.

17. Flesh . . . Spirit—Under one of these two categories Paul places all the various motives which operate on the mind and will, and determine action. In 1 Cor. 2, 14, a similar line of division is drawn.

These are contrary . . . that ye may not do—Antagonistic by divine appointment, this antagonism being intended to exercise a controlling influence over the human will.

18. Not under the law—Those whose conduct is directed by the guiding influences of the Holy Spirit are thereby raised to a higher motives and aspirations to the level of the author of the law, of whom will that law is but an expression.

19-21. The fact that all the works of the flesh here enumerated are evil is not to be taken to mean that everything appertaining to the flesh or its action is evilly wrought. The apostle has just stated that the flesh also has an appointed function, and that it is essential to the control of the human will.
The evil works here enumerated are rather typical of the evil effects wrought by an excessive indulgence of the natural appetites when no due control is exercised over them by the higher spiritual powers.

Lasciviousness—A term which in classical Greek signified insolent contempt for public opinion. But which in the New Testament is used only in the sense of shameless outrages on public decency.

Parties—Gr. Heresies.
Forewarn you—Tell you plainly.

22. The fruit of the Spirit—The natural result of its control in the life of an individual. The enumeration of virtues which follows, includes only such as affect man's relation to his neighbor, the object of the passage being to point out the harmony between the restrain-ing influence of the law and the result of the guidance of the Spirit.

23. Self-control—This word gives us the essence of Paul's conception of temperance which is that of complete mastery over all appetites, tempers, and passions, and over every evil tendency.

25. If we live by the Spirit—If we have spiritual life we should permit that life to be the controlling influence in our daily conduct.

26. Provoking—Or challenging. In the original Greek there is no sense of wanton provocation, but, rather the thought

Deck brought back.

This flower possessed the remarkable power of coming to life again though apparently dead when moistened with a little water, blossoming afresh as if just at its apogee of beauty. This was not a variation of the Indian mango tree trick, for not only did Dr. Deck frequently make the flower obey his awakening touch, but Humboldt constantly performed the experiment before the German Academy. It is this flower, eagerly sought for, but lost to knowledge since the days of the Egyptians, which a Russian botanist, Serge Lostoukoff, claims to have discovered growing in an isolated corner of Arabia. The news is greatly interesting the botanic world, and further information is

ANXIOUSLY LOOKED FOR.

The manner of its originally reaching the hands of Dr. Deck is not without a certain interest and is more than tinged with romance. The sportsman found himself through an accident unable to continue the hunting expedition, and wandered into Upper Egypt with the intention of looking for that Aladdin's palace, the emerald mines of the ancients.
He fell in with an old Arab, whom he carefully nursed and cured of a terrible illness. The Arab was poor and unable to pay in coin; he offered his savior, however, a gift, which he said no emperor or king could bestow, a magic flower that would bloom at command.

He drew forth a few dried stems with some closed, withered buds, so dried with age that the plant cracked. The Arab explained that he had found it in an old tomb in the desert, where it lay on the bosom of a young girl's mummy, the human flower as browned and withered as its sister plant. Squalling in the sun, the old Arab gave Dr. Deck who was listening incredulously, a highly colored eulogium of the miraculous plant. Gravely and reverently he poured a few drops of water over the withered stems, when as if called back to life by a charm, they began to tremble, to move, to contract and expand. Presently the buds lifted themselves as their stems strengthened and slowly inclosed one diaphanous petal after another until they encircled a general part.

The flower thus formed somewhat resembled a daisy, but with a grace and beauty all its own. Within its core lay

SEEDS OF PROMISE.

but the darkness and the airlessness of the tomb had extinguished forever the life germs within. While Dr. Deck watched with fascinated gaze he saw the blossoms gradually fade, wither and droop, and the process reversed. In a few minutes the plant had again taken the aspect of complete death. The stem had lost its fresh color and was brown and dry, the buds drooped on limp stalks like dry balls.

Dr. Deck brought back this wonderful flower to Europe, where it excited great interest. Many efforts have been made since to obtain other specimens.
Botanists have eagerly sought all over Egypt for its living prototype, and tombs have been ransacked, but in vain. The news of its discovery growing in Arabia is extremely interesting, and is only another proof of the circle
in which we are perpetually travelling.

Though probably cultivated by the ancients, already in the Middle Ages it was considered more or less a myth, for though both the Rose of Sharon and the Rose of the Crusades—the form of which may be studied on the tombs of these ancient heroes whose story is told by their crossed legs—somewhat resemble it, neither is that which we may hope to see for ourselves, the real "flower of the Resurrection."

NEST BUILDING ANTS.

The green ants of Australia make nests by bending leaves together and uniting them with a kind of natural glue, hundreds having been seen on one leaf drawing it to the ground, while an equal number waited to receive, hold and fasten it.

To know how to remember and how to bandage, splint and prescribe for minor ailments, and he is even expected to be a master of phonetics and an essayist on subjects varying from the report of a cricket match to the strategy of Moltke or the tactics of Napoleon.

If he has any pride in the appearance of his men he must possess the attributes of tailor, bootmaker and leather seller in order to supervise and inspect the fittings of their garments and the quality of their boots, saddlery and ac-countements, and to look further after their comfort he must be able to pit himself against the retail dealer, so as to watch over the soldiers' interests in their canteens and grocery bars.

On court-martial he plays the part both of judge and jury, and when appearing as prosecutor has often to meet the astute lawyer on his own ground.

As janitor he superintends the various military prisons and detention barracks in England and the Colonies, and as parson he conducts divine service, and in isolated garrisons even buries the dead.

So much, then, for the actual needs of his profession. If, however, he desires to become a social as well as a regimental success he should be a cricketer, a footballer and a polo player; neither must he despise golf, tennis, rackets, aquatics nor bridge. If he can add to these the acquirements of an orator, an actor and a gentleman jockey so much the better, and he can then retire to his bed feeling fully satisfied that he has indeed earned his five shillings and threepence a day.

THE "A'S" HAVE IT.

Adolf, an Austrian artisan, adored
Anna, an aristocrat.

Anna adored Adolf.

Another aristocrat, Alfred, an ambassador, adored Anna.

Anna abhorred Alfred.

Alfred addressed Anna, admitting admiration.

Anna assumed amazement.

Alfred adored Anna.

Anna admonished Alfred.

Alfred adopted aggressiveness.

Alfred's audacity alarmed Anna.

Alfred attempted abducting Anna.

Anna, afraid and agitated, acquainted Adolf.

Adolf accused Alfred.

Alfred, angered, abused Adolf awfully.

Adolf answered Alfred.

Alfred attacked Adolf.

Anna, aghast, aided Adolf.

Adolf and Anna almost annihilated Alfred.

Alfred abdicated absolutely.

Anna accepted Adolf.

Adolf and Anna abruptly absconded, abandoned Austria altogether, arrived at Antwerp, and always abided abroad afterward.

A GENTLE REMONSTRANCE.

An old farmer, who had a perfect hatred of taxes and tax-gatherers, was once called upon by a collector a second time for taxes already paid, but the receipt for which he had mislaid, and as he narrated the story to a friend, he remarked: "Would you believe it, the fellow actually began to abuse me!"

"What did you say?" asked the friend.

"Say? Why I remonstrated with him."

"How did that affect him?"

"Well, I don't know how it affected him, but the poker was bent!"

Love may be blind, but it knows when the gas is on too high.

"Jones, do you know anyone who has a horse for sale?" inquired Brown. "I have reasons for believing that Green has," replied Jones. "Why do you think so?" "Because I sold him one yesterday."

Dutch Rabbits. — Take a nice fresh young rabbit, soak it in salted water for an hour, drain dry; wipe it in a clean cloth and lard with strips of sliced bacon on the back. Truss the rabbit into a neat shape and put in a baking pan, pour over a cupful of water, cover with another pan, and steam until the rabbit is tender. Remove the pan and baste the rabbit with this mixture:
A gill of good vinegar, a dessertspoonful of red currant jelly, the same quantity of made mustard, and one ounce of fresh butter. Baste constantly till the rabbit is browned. Set on a hot dish, butter the rabbit liberally, and serve with a good brown gravy.

DRIED SWEET CORN.

One farmer's wife, in whose blood runs a genius for invention, has constructed several clever household helps,
one of the simplest, albeit most helpful, being a clever device for drying corn. A frame to fit the oven is made of laths placed so that it will be deep rather than wide. After the laths are nailed together, stretch across the frame thin cheese cloth, fastening it firmly. You can have a frame both in the top and bottom of the oven as large or as small as is handy. Fancy the advantage—no heavy plates to lift and burn one's hands on, to say nothing of the damage done the plates! And, because of the rack, one can dry more at a time.

To those who have never before dried sweet corn the following directions may prove useful: In the first place do not boil or cook the corn; it cannot help but lose some of its delicious flavor by the process. Cut from the cob fresh, young sweet corn, being careful not to get any of the cob. If you cut into a thin vessel be sure that it is bright, and even then do not allow it to stand long. Place the corn on the rack in a hot oven.
Allow it to heat and steam for about 15 minutes, after which open the oven door and let the remainder of the drying be done while there is little fire, taking care not to scorch the corn. If the oven is not too hot you can leave it in while preparing meals, always keeping the oven door open. When the corn crackles against a plate it is dried: Place in paper bags and tie up securely to keep away insects.

Cooking.—When you wish to prepare corn for a meal, place over a slow fire and let cook for two or three hours as you would beans; one doesn't mind that when there is constant fire. When cooked serve with a gravy made of cream, or better still, try the old southern way: When the corn is swelled and tender turn into a skillet into which has been placed a generous amount of smoked meat drippings and fry for a short time, just long enough to give it the smoky flavor. Cooked either way it is equal to canned corn and then—one need not worry about salicylic acid.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Line the garbage cans with newspapers and the garbage can be handled much easier.

To fill glass jars stand jar on a steel knife blade, and it may be filled with safety and ease. Set on cloth wet in hot water.

If furniture is infested with moths remove the lining beneath the seat and interline with tar paper. This will also effectually prevent the coming of the pest.

Rubber overshoes can be patched with a strip of surgeon's adhesive plaster, if the hole is not too large. If leather "lifts" are fitted into the heels of rubbers the overshoes will wear longer than without them.

Peroxide of hydrogen is a valuable antiseptic to have in the house. It makes a pleasant mouth wash and throat gargle when diluted and will remove blood stains very satisfactorily if used before the stain is dry.

A glove that is a comparatively new invention is made of cotton threads and filled with a powder that is a god polish.
As the glove is used the powder sifts between the threads, so that the article that is being rubbed is cleaned as well as polished.

To clean diamond panes in lattice windows stir a little kerosene in tepid water. Rub pieces of newspaper soft and soak in this, squeeze them almost dry and then rub the "diamond." Wipe at once with old linen. With other newspaper rubbed between the hands, but not wet, polish the glass.

TAUGHT BROWN A LESSON.

His Wife Called on Him at His Office and Told of Her Household Troubles.

There is a hidden meaning in this story, which he who chooses may discover for himself.

"I'm so glad to find you in," said Mrs. Brown, as she entered her husband's office; "I was afraid you might be out, and I have so much to tell you, dear."

"Something very important?" replied Mr. Brown, interrogatively, and in a tone which plainly said, "Couldn't you have waited until this evening? You see I'm awfully busy."

"Well, no, perhaps not so very important," said Mrs. Brown, paying no attention to her husband's discouragement; "but then it is so nice and cosy here, and you know we don't often have a chance for a quiet talk together."

"Am I not at home—"

"Oh, yes, Henry; you are at home every evening—I'll say that to your credit. But it is so nice to come here and see you."

"But, then, I'm pretty busy this morning."

"I know; but I must tell you what that girl of ours has done. After breakfast this morning she hadn't a drop of hot water to wash the dishes in, and her work was delayed a good half-hour in consequence."

"But, my dear—"

"I know what you are going to say. You think I ought to give her a good talking to. And so I did. But what does it amount to? Only last week I told her to open her dampers so that the oven would heat, and when I went into the kitchen they were shut, and the fire was almost out, and the oven was as cold as a stone. And, by the way, did I tell you that another of those Wedgwood cups was broken? It's the third within a month. Really I believe I shall get distracted. And that reminds me that we didn't get the clothes dry on Monday, and—"

"But, my dear," broke in Brown. "I've got work to do. Of course, I sympathize with you, but why don't you tell me about these things when I'm at home?"

"Why, Henry!" exclaimed Mrs. B. "The idea! Don't you have so many other things to talk about when you are at home? How can I interrupt you to talk about my domestic affairs when you have so much to tell me about the way the office-boy plagues you, and about the distracting manner in which your partner refuses to do things as you want them done, and what a nuisance that Mr. Robinson is who never knows when to go, and—why, Henry, aren't my evenings sacred to your business affairs? But I must be going. I'll try to come in again in an hour or so."

Mrs. Brown did not come in again that day. But it is a curious circumstance that from and after that visit Brown never talked "shop" at home.

QUEER WAYS OF THE UPOTOS.

Can't Look at Their Mother-in-Law and Women Eat Special Fish.

The Upotos live on the northern bank of the Congo between Ikonmango and Dobbo, or between the twentieth and twenty-second degrees of east longitude, and seem to have long resided in the region. They show a marked disinclination to quit it. They live chiefly by fishing, and one of the first things to strike a visitor is that certain fish are

ON THE FARM

THE BEST TYPES OF ROOFING.

The ideal roof for the farm structure, barn, poultry house, tool and implement shed, corn crib, etc., is perhaps first of all one which is water tight and has lasting qualities. Initial cost figures in this, yet the lowest price does not necessarily mean the cheapest in the long run. When lumber is cheap the shingle roof, of course has many advocates. But with permanently advancing prices here, farmers look to something equally good or better in the way of prepared roofing. Several kinds are on the market and all of them have good points. Exactly which is best for the individual farmer each must decide for himself; but first of all thoroughly post yourself through general reading, and then through a study of the why and wherefore as put out in the printed descriptions of the various manufacturers.

Slate roofs were long regarded highly and are to some extent still in favor. But an objection other than that of great weight on the structure and initial cost is the fact that a slate roof is a ready conductor of heat. A roofing material should be selected which is a good non-conductor of both heat and cold, keeping the building warm in winter and cool in summer. It should be one that will not rust, that is not unfavorably affected by gases or moisture, can be laid by anyone and is easily repaired.

Some excellent roofings along this line are manufactured, requiring no special skill to lay, and adapted to roofs of any slant. Among the best of these tar is rigidly excluded, and various compounds used instead, usually a combination with various layers of felt. This makes a pliable roofing, impervious to moisture, relatively light in weight, lasting, and easy to handle.

Another type of roof, popular for its attractive qualities, is the asphalt roof. This, like most things of the kind, is the product of an evolution. All remember the old coal tar roof, which on hot summer days dripped from the eaves. The trouble with the tar roof was that the pitch from which it was made had been robbed of most of its valuable qualities, leaving a hard, coke-like substance. To make this pliable, dead oils are added, which gave temporary elasticity, but when the oil evaporated, it left the pitch hard, brittle, and in prime condition for cracking and disintegration.

The legitimate successor of the tar roof and one that has none of its disadvantages is the roofing made of natural asphalt and various binder materials. Of course, the asphalt roof varies, but a fair example of the best type consists of a layer of natural asphalt, then a layer of wool felt, another layer of asphalt, a sheet of burlap, still more asphalt, and the whole surmounted by a top dressing of finely crushed quartz. Where a lighter roofing would answer all purposes, two or three of these layers are eliminated, the thinnest having only two layers of asphalt with felt between them. In properly made roofing the burlap or felt or both are thoroughly saturated with the asphalt, and every fibre is sealed in this waterproof sheathing.

THE FARM WORKSHOP.

The first consideration should be the building. This may be some shed or outbuilding already standing on the farm, or a lean-to may be built to the barn. Smokehouse or buggy house, for a few dollars. In case it should be necessary all the tools except the forge could be kept in the barn, and this could be covered with a few boards far enough from the barn to insure safety from fire, writes Mr. H. T. Grunstead. If a new building is to be constructed or an extraordinary cow once in a great while, but the man who expects to build up a herd of superior merit must necessarily raise his own stock.

A clean manger is greatly to be advocated in feeding horses. It should be remembered that the horse's stomach is small, and that it empties itself every 4½ hours. This will be a guide to the period of time which should elapse between meals. Regular hours are of great importance. It is unwise to overfeed a horse, and just as imprudent to let him get ravenously hungry. When a weekly mash is given, this should be done on Saturday. It is wise, too, to reduce the feed on Sunday, say by a third.

Do not forget to clean out the entire interior, floors included, of your poultry-houses forthwith. Dig out an inch or two of the earth floor and spread it over the farm. Allow the interior and the floor of the house a week or two to become thoroughly dry. Before the rainy season sets in, put from three to six inches—the more the better—of dry soil on the floor of the poultry-houses. Pack it down a little, so as to be ready for winter. Before winter sets in, go over it with a coarse rake to loosen up the top of the soil, and put not less than twelve to fourteen inches of good dry litter of some kind all over the floor. There must be from twelve to fourteen inches of good dry litter all over the floor on top of the dry earth for them to scratch in. This gives healthful exercise. Do not be afraid of having too much litter on the floor.

FARM NOTES.

Watch all the bolts on the plows and harrows. Take a wrench with you wherever you go to work. A moment now and then may save two or three hours of time looking up a new bolt or nut.

For general crop purposes, a fertilizer containing about three per cent. nitrogen, eight per cent. phosphoric acid and seven per cent. potash would ordinarily be useful, and this is about the grade of fertilizer that can be made by the purchase of nitrogen in the form of nitrate of soda and dried blood, phosphoric acid in dissolved rock, and potash in nitrate of potash. A very good formula to follow in mixing these goods is to use 1,200 pounds dissolved rock, 200 pounds nitrate of soda, 300 pounds dried blood and 300 pounds muriate of potash for one ton of the mixture.

Probably the best way in which to control wireworms is by late fall or early winter plowing, repeated for two or three years. This destroys the wireworms by bringing them up to the surface of the ground, where, exposed to the freezing and thawing of the winter, many will perish or be devoured. Breaking the cells above described appears to cause the death of the insects which occupy them, and thus fall plowing is useful for the destruction of this stage as well. Rotation of crops is unfavorable to the increase of wireworms, and should be practised for this reason if for no other.

ALCOHOL IN CORN COBS

POSSIBILITIES JUSTIFY ESTABLISHMENT OF DISTILLERY.

Fifteen Gallons of Spirits to a Ton of Them—Profit Seen Now in Culled Ears.

Investigations now being carried on by the United States Agricultural Department at Hoopston, Ill., have brought to light another important commercial factor in the form of a waste product which can be successfully and at small cost manufactured into a staple commodity. The experiments now being prosecuted have proved beyond doubt that the large quantities of corn cobs which are hauled out on farm lands each season by corn-canning factories can be converted into alcohol in sufficient quantities to justify establishing a distillery plant in connection with the cannery.

Acting upon the suggestion of the officers of the Illinois Canning Company to provide all necessary equipment for carrying on the experiment, the Agricultural Department of Washington sent two expert chemists to Hoopston, who have been engaged in making deductions. Simple methods of fermentation have been employed and the yield in alcohol shows a strong eleven gallons to the ton of green cobs. The same methods employed in handling the cobs have been applied to the juice extracted from the cornstalk and show there are

SIX GALLONS TO THE TON.

These experiments, while not exactly in harmony with previous experiments carried on by the department at Washington, are sufficiently near to denote the possibilities of converting a waste product into a marketable commodity. At different times during the last 25 years the department has conducted experiments along the same line, but with common field corn. These tests show that there are 240 pounds of fermentable substance in a ton of green field cornstalks, which will yield about half their weight in absolute alcohol. In round numbers a ton of stalks will produce 100 pounds of alcohol or 200 pounds of proof spirits. As a gallon of alcohol weighs nearly seven pounds, there should be fifteen gallons of alcohol in a ton of stalks.

It is the generally accepted theory that sweet cornstalks contain a larger percentage of alcohol than the common field corn, although the experiments at the cannery did not prove this to be the case. However, there are other features in connection with a cannery establishment which makes possible the quantity expected by the department.

Not only are the cobs a waste product, but the irregular and spoiled ears as well. Hand labor is yet employed in husking, and all ears are put in, as the wage scale is based upon a measure. These measures are emptied upon a conveyor and the ears unfit for canning are

CULLED AS THEY GO BY.

These culled ears are also waste. The expense of bringing them to the point where they are culled and cast aside is quite as great as the perfect ears. The addition of the corn on the cob adds further to the possibilities as to the amount of alcohol obtainable from a ton of cobs and will have its influence in bringing the quantity to a greater figure.

The discovery is a very important one, which tends further to increase the list of agricultural products from which alcohol may be obtained.

What the cost of attaching a distilling plant to the packing plant would be has not been determined. The actual expense of distilling the cobs should not be greater than three cents per gallon. Inasmuch as they are a waste which now requires an outlay to dis-

of the Congo between the twentieth and twenty-second degrees of east longitude, and seem to have long resided in the region. They show a marked disinclination to quit it. They live chiefly by fishing, and one of the first things to strike a visitor is that certain fish are reserved for the men, others for the women, and yet a third kind for the slaves. These slaves are chiefly slaves by birth or men sold for their debts. They are well treated, and opposite Iringui is an island in which all slaves who are incapable of working are allowed to reside by themselves. One form of semi-servitude is called lisokko. This is when a man, not having money to buy a wife, sells himself to a chief to obtain one. The offspring of such a marriage becomes the property of the chief.

One very curious custom is that a man may never look at his mother-in-law. If he does, he has to pay her a fine of 30 to 50 mitakkos, which are brass rods equal to a half penny. Neither must the mother-in-law look at her daughter's husband. Children are treated with great kindness, and in fact spoilt. Their mothers do not chastise them, even if the children strike them. Among the duties of the women is that of shaving their husbands. The chief amusements are singing, dancing and wrestling matches between villages. The victors are painted red; so also are corpses before burial; but in the case of women it is not the bodies, but the coverings in which they are wrapped, that are so colored.

The Upotos believe in life after death and in spirits. They think their dead relatives and friends are always watching them, although they cannot be seen. Their god is named Libanza. Their account of the origin of the white and black races is curious. Libanza sent his son Tserenga on earth to see what the races of mankind were doing. Among Europeans he was well received, so he gave them a white skin and much knowledge, but among the Africans he was badly received, so he left them black and stupid. One of the myths entertained by this people is that the Congo and its many tributaries were created by the tears of the tribes weeping for a favorite chief long ago. The moon is supposed to be an immense ship engaged in conveying the souls of the dead to Libanza, and the stars are the eyes of the dead, who sleep during the day.

Sometimes it happens that a married man has a great deal to say, but his wife won't let him say it.

a few dollars. In case it should be necessary all the tools except the forge could be kept in the barn, and this could be covered with a few boards far enough from the barn to insure safety from fire, writes Mr. H. T. Grunstead. If a new building is to be constructed or an old one remodeled, I should say a room 12x14 feet with dirt or cement floor double doors in one end, a window of two sashes placed horizontally in one side, and a regular perpendicular window in the opposite side, would constitute a convenient and well-lighted workshop. This will prove every way ample. A work bench 2x10 feet made of 2x12-inch lumber for the top and 1x12 front board with 2x6 legs, should be set under the horizontal window. The bench should be equipped with a good steel-jawed vise, attached near one end. A bench drill should be screwed on near the other end. I like to have drawers and shelves under a part of the bench, to the right when facing it. Four drawers 18 inches wide and 6 inches deep, one above the other, and a set of shelves two feet and a foot apart next to the drawers would make safe and convenient receptacles for tools and material. Some of the drawers should be divided into compartments to accommodate small tools, bolts, screws, etc. The shelves could be used for rods, heavy bolts and scraps. Convenient receptacles for chisels are leather loops tacked to the wall above the bench. The saw, square, drawshave, etc., may be hung on nails.

If only a few tools can be procured they should be of good quality. I would begin with a 26-inch No 8 hand saw, steel-faced claw hammer, steel square, set of bits and ratchet brace, three chisels from 1½-inch down, and a draw-shave. One could get along fairly well with these which would not cost more than $5. The tools that could be added to this list and are really necessary to do a good job of woodwork are, a set of planes—Jack plane, smoothing plane and block plane—spirit level, spoke shave, oilstone and grindstone. This will run the cost up to about $10. This could be added to as means would permit of circumstance demand.

Six pounds of cornmeal with four pounds of wheat bran and 1½ pounds of oilmeal with eight pounds of timothy hay, is a good ration for work horses. SHADOWED.

A man was going home to his wife and family. It was growing dark. His road from the station was a lonely one, and he was getting along as fast as he could, when he suddenly suspected that a man behind was following him purposely. The faster he went, the faster the man went, until they came to a churchyard.

"Now," he said to himself, "I'll find out if he's after me," and he entered the churchyard.

The man followed him. Vague visions of revolvers and garroters grew upon him. He made a detour of a splendid mausoleum. Still the man was after him, round and round.

At last he turned and faced the fellow, and asked: "What the dickens do you want? What are you following me for?"

"Well, sir, do you always go home like this? I am going up to Mr. Sub-bub's house with a parcel, and the porter at the station told me that if I'd follow you I should find the place, as you lived next door. Are you going home at all to-night?"

What the cost of attaching a distilling plant to the packing plant would be has not been determined. The actual expense of distilling the cobs should not be greater than three cents per gallon. Inasmuch as they are a waste which now requires an outlay to dispose of them, their value is small. The annexation of a distilling plant under these circumstances would cost less than an individual plant. A molasses plant with a daily capacity of 10,000 gallons is estimated at $40,000, but a plant with a less capacity would in most cases prove better for the canner.

The problem of how to preserve the alcohol in the stalks until such time as they can be handled without interfering with the rush incident to the packing season could be solved by the

where the juices could be preserved, or some method of drying, looking to the subsequent utilization of the product.

The fact that there are now over 100 articles of manufacture into which the use of alcohol enters makes it all the more important that these waste products of the farm and factory should be converted into a marketable commodity. Already the manufacturer of gasoline engines has made his investigations and experiments looking to the near conversion of the small gasoline engine into one employing alcohol, with as few changes as are possible. The portable engines so much in use on the farm for pumping water, cleaning grain, chopping wood and doing various other farm work, can be made to do the work by a few slight changes. And the farmer will find no objection upon the part of the insurance company to his keeping in his barn a can of alcohol, where a can of gasoline would mean the cancelling of his policy.

CHINESE CARPENTERS.

They Are Remarkably Adept In Use of Small Axe.

Naturally preeminent among the skilled craftsmen of China, the carpenter still maintains the leadership. Though almost invariably wedded to the use of the tools of his ancestors and to their methods, judged by results he is more efficient in his line than are the average of the foreign trained fitters and machinists in theirs, though a constant diminution of the difference is in progress.

In judging the performance of the native workmen it is almost impossible to avoid the popular bias that addiction to their own methods and tools invariably bespeaks fatuous conservatism. Though this is in many cases true, it will often be found on careful observation that what has passed for a stubborn blindness to the virtue of innovation is in reality a keener perception of comparative merits than the judge himself was aware of.

This is particularly true of Chinese carpenters. While most of their commonest tools differ in some radical way from our own, it is never safe to assume the superiority of the Western product. Their small axe, for example, is a beautifully balanced tool, and they are remarkably adept in the use of it, being able to work as true a surface therewith as can be obtained with an adze in the hands of the white man.

On heavy work it is customary for two to hew together on opposite sides, striking alternative blows. Both hands are used and the recover is over the shoulder, alternate right and left. There is a freedom of swing with an accuracy of delivery that is a treat to watch and the rapidity of blows is almost bewildering.

GREAT BRITAIN'S POLICE

HOW THEY WATCH FOREIGN SPIES AND ANARCHISTS.

International Crime Experts — Their Training and Duties — Under stand Heliograph.

About twenty years ago, when the more desperate section of the Irish Fenians was almost baffling the English and Irish police by dynamite and other outrages, it was decided to organize a distinct detective machinery, known as the "Special Branch" of the Criminal Investigation Department, for the purpose of locating and dissecting the various murder and dynamite plots, identifying the men connected therewith, and keeping them under observation; also of course for protecting public men whose lives were in danger—notably Arthur Balfour, when he was the Chief Secretary for Ireland.

The work of organizing this branch, writes a correspondent of the London Chronicle, was entrusted to Chief Inspector Littlechild, who retired on a pension some eleven years ago. The machinery and methods of the Special Branch were found to be equally well adapted to the ultra earnest Russian patriot or the fanatical bomb thrower from France, Italy or Spain.

The Criminal Investigation Department Special Branch is, although composed almost entirely of C. I. D. men, more directly under the control of the Home Office than the rest of the Metropolitan police. Its duties consist in what is described politely as "political work," including the supervision of and other persons who may be a source of personal danger to the King or Queen or to members of our royal family, or to foreign potentates visiting our country, or our own Ministers of State. The branch is sometimes kept busy in trying to trace the source of anonymous letters written to any of the above; it also undertakes the necessary inquiries in the case of applications for letters of naturalization, or on behalf of the Foreign Office, for passports. Persons suspected of being foreign spies also receive attention from the S. B., generally at the instigation either of the Admiralty or the War Office.

The present staff consists of Supt. Quinn—an admirable appointment—one chief inspector, three inspectors and fifty-two other detectives, in the case of two or three of whom the old established rule that every detective must have started as an ordinary constable has been waived. These exceptions are linguists and men of very peculiar experience among the most undesirable aliens in this and other countries.

Some thirty of this number are divided up among six foreign and seven British ports—which shall be nameless—to keep observation on outgoing and incoming passenger boats, a few of them occasionally going abroad on special duty connected with royal visits to Continental countries or otherwise.

One member of the branch speaks and writes seven languages, another three, one has resided in five different countries and speaks four languages, and most of them know French. Heliographing is understood by some of them.

Our detectives do not, as is often supposed, permanently safeguard the interests of other countries as regards foreign "political" suspects in this country. At least three European governments are represented in England by their own

of the various physical characteristics of the subject, are being carried in the pockets of some dozen or more S. B. sleuth hounds.

While the principal officers of this branch receive salaries ranging from £180 to £500 per annum, the rank and file, who have to hunt down men with funds at their disposal, draw from £2 to £2 15s a week, no extra allowance being made for languages.

ON PAYING THE PIPER.

After Doing Too Much Smoking Mr. Gliggblitter Propounds an Idea.

"Too much smoking will keep one awake nights, for one thing," said Mr. Gliggblitter. "I like to smoke, and I am inclined to indulge myself too much in that luxury after dinner.

"At that comfortable time I sit and smoke and read and read and smoke until it's time to go to bed. And then, after such an indulgence in smoking, I am likely to find myself lying awake for an hour or two to pay for it.

"It is my experience in life that you can't get something for nothing, and likewise it is my experience that if one indulge himself too freely in any pleasure he must pay for it later. Young men, with the resiliency of youth, can't be made to realize this; but nature charges all these overindulgences to their account, which, in due course, they are inevitably called upon to settle.

"So young men are careless of their resources; but it must be confessed that there are older men, too, who never learn wisdom, that if they dance they must pay the piper; and sometimes, I will admit, I myself smoke too much nights, and then I can't sleep. I am a weak brother, given to the enjoyment of the moment. But I can sleep well if I have the strength of mind to cut out that last pipe, and I can rise in the morning refreshed and vigorous as a recompense for that slight sacrifice.

"Philosophers say that the only actual possession that man can have is his will, his power to control himself, which is something inseparable from him except by his own surrender of it. Lands, houses, money, everything else, can be taken from us, but not our power over ourselves, our will, if we choose to use and exercise it, which we may do with innumerable resulting benefits, including even the restoration of lands, houses and moneys lost, as aforesaid.

"But if, as we are more likely to do, we have clung with tenacity to our tangible possessions and are suffering only personally by indolent indulgence, why, that we can correct, and we can vastly heighten our enjoyment of life, by the exercise of the will, as, for instance, we can give ourselves the sweet boon of refreshing sleep by cutting out that last pipe; and to bring this simple fact to the minds of some to whom it may not have occurred is really all that I set out to say.

"True, there are other causes of sleeplessness besides overindulgence in tobacco, but that is one of them; and if the thoughtless smoker will deny himself to-night for an hour before he goes to bed and so give his nerves a chance to recover their natural tranquility he will sleep happily and rise refreshed and find a far keener enjoyment of his pipe in the morning."

HOW BRITAIN GETS MEAT

GLIMPSE AT LIFE ON A CATTLE-BEAT AT SEA.

The Poor Cattle Suffer Terribly if the Vessel Encounters a Storm.

Every day in the year the United Kingdom consumes nearly 3,000 cattle which have been imported from abroad. In the same space of time we eat 6,500 foreign sheep and more than 1,000 foreign pigs, to say nothing of other meat, such as rabbits, of which animals we take over 16,000 tons yearly from Australia. Last year over $4,000,000 worth of frozen Bunny came to our ports from New South Wales alone and the trade is an increasing one, says London Answers.

Nearly all this foreign meat is brought to us from foreign countries—the United States, the Argentine Republic, Canada, and Australasia. Some is alive, some dead and frozen, some in tins. Of live meat, we annually import over half a million oxen and about the same number of sheep and lambs.

The most interesting part of this huge import trade is without doubt the carriage of live stock. Some years ago the writer crossed from New York to London in the depths of winter on a huge cargo vessel, which carried 600 cattle, about 300 sheep, and a large quantity of pigs. These were penned on the lower decks, and as the weather, though cold, was fortunately fairly fine, the losses were small.

BELLOWING, BLEEDING HEAPS.

Yet even so, almost every morning three or four unfortunate cattle which had been injured and consequently slaughtered, were slung by the horns and flung overboard. In bad weather the losses among live-stock on the Atlantic passage are sometimes very heavy indeed.

Cattle ships roll fearfully. This is no doubt largely owing to the great weight so near the top of the ship, but it is an odd fact that cattle have the power of making a vessel roll even in calm water. Cattle on board ship are confined in pens. In the modern first-class cattle carrier these pens are of stout material, but on some tramp steamers the timber is much too frail. Consequently, when a gale comes and the heavy beasts are flung against the rails, they give way, and the unhappy creatures, perhaps horribly wounded by the sharp splintered ends, are thrown in bellowing, bleeding heaps. Then if a wave breaks over the vessel, comes confusion worse confounded. The poor brutes with horns and legs smashed are swept from side to side of the streaming, slippery deck. It is as much as a man's life is worth to venture among the frenzied, helpless creatures yet the cattle man is here, there, and everywhere, and is often nobly backed up by the "stiffs," as those men are called who are allowed to work their passages by attending to the needs of the floating farmyard.

CATTLE SMELL THE LAND.

It is too dreadful a subject to dwell upon, but that this is no fancy picture can be proved by actual statistics. One vessel bound from the Argentine to Liverpool lost 103 cattle out of 140, another 59 cattle out of 109, and nearly 400 sheep out of 600. A third vessel landed less than 100 sheep out of more than 700.

Such cases as these are happily the exception, and not the rule. The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has done a great deal, and now-a-days, unless the weather be exceptionally bad, the public may rest assured that cattle suffer very little indeed on the sea passage. Most of them feed very well, and drinking who are attached to the embassies, and act independently of us. A foreign detective sent here for special purpose, however, as a rule places himself in communication with "the Yard." At present there is no combined international movement against this class of crime.

The results of the special branch organization cannot be judged by what is read in the newspapers as regards the suppression of anarchists—there have been only two prosecutions in the last two years, but a vast amount of quiet work has been achieved. Suspected persons are located, observed, and often frightened out of the country unknown to the police.

The relations between the detective and the anarchist are peculiar. One sees a member of the S. B. enter one of three shops suspected of providing informal meeting places for anarchists not far from Shaftesbury avenue, ostensibly to make a trifling purchase. The owner of the shop and the one customer, an Italian suspect, each greet him, but in two different languages; both know his business almost as well as he does. But there is no animosity between the hunted and the hunter.

On another occasion a crowd of more or less undesirable aliens in one of the dangerous foreign quarters is looking on at a struggle between a couple of constables and some roughs, one of the former having just sounded the shrill signal for help. The onlookers are revealing the police in several languages and some of them are inclined to join in (it is thirty to one against the uniforms), when an Englishman, of no remarkable physique, pushing his way through the outskirts of the crowd, is keenly scrutinizing faces—one in particular, that of a man who is exhorting others to violence. The Englishman is recognized, and the foreigner who interests him steals away, whispering something to acquaintances as he passes them. They and others follow suit, and the S. B. man has achieved more than three constables could have done; moreover, he has located a man who has been lost sight of lately.

The force is apt to have its zeal severely tried by false scents and even hoaxes. Less than a month ago what appeared to any one but an electrical expert to be a

was discovered on the day of the arrival in London of two threatened members of the royal family and at a spot whence an outrage might have been effected. It was in the ordinary course of precautionary measures—the S. B. never despises any suspicious sign, however slight—taken to an isolated spot in St. James's Park and examined by the Home Office Inspector of Explosives and pronounced to be nothing worse than a discarded dry cell battery. At another time not far distant the branch had to shadow some men who were suspected of being foreign spies taking observations near an important military position, and the "spies" proved to be as harmless as the "bomb."

At the present moment, in view of the recent outrage in Madrid and the visit of the King and Queen of Spain to England, the S. B. is particularly busy, and an interesting story could be made out of the various men and movements to which the S. B. activity is directed; but the writer of this article, who has been in touch with the branch since its foundation, has no intention, while satisfying the curiosity of the public on a most absorbing subject, of providing the miscreant with valuable information.

Suffice it to say that, among other precautionary measures, three newspapers published in London, two in Yiddish and one in German, and one published in Berlin (where the police are supposed to exercise a strong press censorship) and circulated in London, are being carefully read and translated into English, and that several very interesting "ectrices" of the proverbial order are burying their heads in the sand and imagining that consequently their whereabouts and actions are a profound secret; whereas their photos, each one bearing a description

Company possessed the richest diamond fields in the world.

Diamonds are found in the large deposits of lava or "blue ground" that has been forced up from the depths in past ages. Each mine consists of a large, basin-like crater gradually tapering to a great depth. Within a radius of three and a half miles, five of the world's leading diamond mines are located. Here the Kaffir boys work in gangs of twenty-five to forty, drilling and blasting the hard blue rock. The walls are worked until they break through into another chamber.

When it reaches the surface the precious earth is automatically conveyed to the dumping grounds. Here it is spread to a depth not exceeding ten inches and allowed to remain from three to six months, according to the rapidity with which it disintegrates. When finally sent to the washing machines it is mixed with water and passed through revolving screens filled with holes.

This method of handling is being superseded by mechanical sorters which consist of several inclined perforated shelves, loaded with grease. The diamonds stick to the grease, while all other material passes from one shelf to another.

Great precautions are taken against theft. All employees are engaged for three months, during which time they are kept under close guard. While they are not at work they are confined in a large compound surrounded by high fences. A central store is located in this enclosure. The men enter and depart by long, subterranean passages which lead from the compound to the mines. Towers are located from which powerful searchlights are operated at night. The employees are also searched every evening.

In spite of all this care ten to fifteen per cent. of the diamonds mined are stolen. In order to discourage the buying of stolen gems, a penalty of from five to fifteen years is enforced against the buyers.

The De Beers Company operates seven mines and employs fourteen hundred white workmen and seventy-two hundred blacks. The annual output is from six to eight million carats, or from one to one and a half tons a year.

It is eight months from the time the rock is drilled until the extracted diamond is ready for the assayer's examination.

ALCOHOL FROM CORN COBS.

Eleven Gallons Were Distilled From One Ton.

In the manufacture of alcohol from corn cobs and corn stalks, at small cost the United States Department of Agriculture is developing a new industry that is likely to be of large commercial value. Investigations which the department is making at Hoopes-ton, Ill., have proved that the large quantities of corn cobs which every year heretofore have gone to waste can be converted into alcohol in sufficient quantities so as to justify the erection of a distilling plant in connection with a corn cannery.

The Department of Agriculture sent two chemists to Hoopes-ton to make experiments at a large cannery there. They have succeeded by simple methods of fermentation in getting a yield of eleven gallons of alcohol from a ton of green cobs, and six gallons of alcohol from a ton of green corn stalks.

MEASURING PAIN.

A new branch of science heralds its appearance in Paris. It is named Dolormetry, and its function is the "measurement" of the dynamics of pain by material means. The dolometer shows that the dynamic force of a sharp cut with an ordinary carter's whip is equal to about 285lb., but that a vigorous jerk at the reins puts a pressure of about 305lb. on the horse's head.

"Let go the anchor!" yelled the captain. "I ain't touching it," said the new deck hand.

MURDER CLIMAX TO SECRET PACT.

Lad of Eighteen Slays an Old Couple for Funds.

A lad named Brown, of Sydney, Australia, only 18 years of age, who is about to be tried for the murder of an old man and his wife, named O'Keefe and their servant, Gillick, tells an extraordinary story as to his motive for the crime.

He says he had no grudge against the O'Keefes, who had been most kind to him. But he was a member of a secret society, whose objects were to start a revolution in favor of a "White Australia." The oaths binding the members were, he declares, so stringent that he would hang before he gave the names of his associates.

The society was short of funds, and it was decided that O'Keefe's bank books must be stolen. He was deputed for this work, and set out on a Sunday, armed with a bayonet and a sandbag. He had, he states, no intention of murder, but meant merely to stun the old couple by means of the sandbag.

He found Mrs. O'Keefe seated by the fire, and struck her on the head with the sandbag. The bag burst, and the old lady struck Brown on the neck with a bottle. Mr. O'Keefe ran to his wife's help with a gun, and then Brown stabbed both of them. Gillick appeared at the end of the struggle and flung himself on Brown, who stabbed him as well.

Brown cannot be induced to express the slightest regret for his crime or to divulge even the name of the secret society at whose orders he attempted the theft.

TORTURED BY FIERCE ZULUS.

Terrible Acts Which Prompted Troops to Cry "No Surrender!"

Henry Tully, who has been nearly thirty years in South Africa, writes from Pietermaritzburg to his brother, Capt. R. Tully, of South Shields, England, defending the troops operating in Natal against the charges of barbarity brought by Keir Hardie and some other M.P.'s.

He states that the very opposite was the case. The women and children were taken care of, and only the natives who were found in arms against us were killed.

With regard to the other side of the picture, the writer says: "Brooks and Brown, of my old corps, the Natal Mounted Police, were most terribly mutilated. In the case of Veal, a non-combatant, he must have suffered awful torture. A native witness has confessed to us that the poor fellow was held down while the soles of his feet were cut off. He fainted, and when he came to he was made to walk a distance, carrying a heavy load on his head.

"His right hand was cut off, and he had to salute himself with his dead hand. After that his eyes were gouged out, and he was dismembered while still living. Can you wonder that the men of McKenzie's column, when they found his mutilated body, should cry out, 'Take on surrender, sir?'"

Of course it's all right to be born a leader, but the man in the rear has a better opportunity to get away.

The surgeon of a large hospital was paying a visit to the patients when he came to a cot whereon lay an Irishman, who was not bearing his pain very bravely, for he was groaning loudly. "Oh, come, my poor fellow," remonstrated the surgeon, "try and bear your pain like a man. It's no use kicking against fate." "Shure, you're roight, sorr," groaned the Irishman, who had been severely kicked by a mule. "Specially whin they're the fate of a mule!"

Cruelty to Animals has been a great deal, and now-a-days, unless the weather be exceptionally bad, the public may rest assured that cattle suffer very little indeed on the sea passage. Most of them feed very well, and drinking water is always plentiful. The modern cattle boat is so large—some of them are over 10,000 tons—that rolling is largely eliminated, and, indeed, the beasts have more to fear from the heat of summer than from the storms of winter.

Two curious facts about the carriage of live cattle are worth mentioning. One is that they have a peculiar power of discoloring white paint all over the ship, and the other that they are able to "smell" land long before it is in sight.

To turn to the importation of dead meat. As most readers are aware, it is frozen before being shipped, is carried in a refrigerator hold, and on arrival in this country is at once transferred by insulated lighters to cold storage.

Most of our frozen meat—mutton especially—comes from New Zealand and the Argentine. The freezing is done in great chambers which each hold 60,000 carcasses, and three great refrigerating engines produce the appalling cold of 30 degrees below zero. Each carcass, after being frozen as hard as stone, is wrapped in a cotton cloth, weighed and ticketed, and transferred to the ship, where they are stored in the cold-air chamber, the temperature of which is kept at about twenty degrees, or twelve degrees of frost. Remember, these ships have to pass through the tropics. It is odd, when gasping on the deck in the Red Sea, in a temperature of perhaps 105 degrees in the shade, to think that one might go snowballing in the hold just below.

THREE DAYS TO THAW.

London's cold storage warehouses will hold over two million frozen carcasses. Nelson's Wharf at Lambeth is one of the largest. It is six storeys high and if you want to enter, you have to do so by a door on the top floor. There are no doors below, for if there were, every time one was opened warm air would get in, and, of course, rise to the upper floors. Here the meat is stored until it is needed, and then very carefully "unfrozen." The latter process is a most important one. It usually takes three whole days. If it is done too rapidly, the meat is soggy, wet and nasty, and quite spoilt. On the other hand, if slowly and carefully carried out, the thawed meat is left dry and firm, exactly resembling that newly killed.

The enormous proportions of the frozen meat industry are really almost miraculous when one considers that the first cargo of frozen mutton came to England only twenty-six years ago. It was in 1880 that the Strathleven brought the first cargo of 400 carcasses from Melbourne to London.

ROYALTY AND THE TELEGRAPH.

No European ruler uses the telegraph so much as the Emperor of Russia. He has a secret code both for his private and his official messages, and expends $25,000 a year in this kind of correspondence. The German Emperor spends $15,000 a year in the same way, and he uses a code which he has invented himself, and which he finds very useful whenever he desires to communicate with the Cabinet Ministers or other prominent officials. The telegraph is not used to any extent either by the King of Italy, the Emperor of Austria, or the King of Greece; but, on the other hand, King Edward and Queen Alexandra use it constantly. King Edward signs his private despatches "Albert Edward" or "Bertie," and the Queen, who always signs hers "Alexandra," writes quite as many in German as in English.

STAMPING OUT MUTINY PRICE OF GREAT POWER IN MERRY OLD ENGLAND

CZAR DEGRADED A REGIMENT WITH HIS OWN HAND.

A British Battalion Blew Itself to Pieces at Malta to Avoid Punishment.

Seldom has a sterner punishment been meted out to an insubordinate regiment than that which has recently been inflicted by the Czar upon the Preobrazhensky Guards.

This is emphatically the corps d'élite of the Russian army. In it his Majesty served his "time" with the colors, a duty incumbent upon every Russian, from the Emperor down to the lowest peasant.

Of it, after his accession to the throne, he became Honorary Colonel. Its officers are all nobles, the best and bluest blood in Russia. Even the privates and picked men belong, most of them, to good families.

When, therefore, the Czar found that disaffection was rife even in its ranks, his anger knew no bounds. He had the whole of the officers and men paraded before him, and after addressing to them a few scathing words, he publicly, with his own hands, tore up the uniform he was wont to wear upon occasion of his honorary commander. Then the corps was relegated by the Imperial Ukase to the status of an ordinary line battalion, and banished from St. Petersburg to a remote and dull provincial town.

WHOLE REGIMENTS WIPED OUT.

And now, on top of all this, comes the news that Colonel Gadon, the officer in command of the offending regiment, has been cashiered; as has also Prince Wassilitchikov, Aide-de-Camp-General to the Czar and Commander of the Brigade of Guards, and General Ozerov, commanding the First Division of the Guards.

Severe measures indeed! Yet, from the point of view of military discipline, fully justified. Mutiny is an ugly thing, and in no army in the world are these guilty of it shown any mercy whatever.

In India, in 1857, whole regiments, known to be disaffected, were simply wiped out of existence, after having been surrounded by loyal troops. Chaka, the Napoleon of Zululand, if he had the slightest suspicion of an impi's loyalty, or if one had shown cowardice in battle, used to send other impi's against it to "eat it up."

In 1807 a British composite battalion, forming part of the Maltese garrison, mutinied, and shut themselves up in the strong Fort Ricasoli, overlooking the Grand Harbor.

WHEN THE GRENADIERS MUTINIED.

From this vantage point they attempted to parley with the Governor, demanding better and more liberal rations, the abolition of corporal punishment, and a higher rate of pay. But the Governor declined even to listen to their demands, much less to reply to them.

Instead, he surrounded the fort with troops and cannons, swearing that "not one mutinous dog amongst them all should escape hanging." As a matter of fact they did, though; for after sustaining an eight days' siege, they fired the magazine, blowing into the air the fort, themselves, and some hundreds of their besiegers.

Other times, other methods. When the Grenadier Guards mutinied at Wellington Barracks, on July 7th, 1890, the regiment was merely banished to Bermuda. This kind of punishment, by the way, appears to be a favorite one with our military authorities. At all events it is the one most often employed.

Thus, when the Royal Irish Rifles broke into revolt at Gibraltar, in 1887, they were bundled off to Egypt at twenty-four hours' notice, and sent up the Nile to roast at Assuan.

THE REAL SUFFERINGS OF THE PEOPLE YOU ENVY.

Many Celebrated People Have Acted Their Part While Suffering Agony.

The humble individual passing his life in obscurity, and often tempted to envy those who occupy a big position "in the public eye," has frequently little conception of the physical pains and penalties that attach to popularity. The man or woman condemned to figure in public has often to wear a brave presence and to smile under hidden, unsuspected torture. They are "on the rack."

Modern political life is the life of the galley-slave, and demands a constitution of iron. Addressing a huge meeting and making a speech of an hour is a physical feat which some men could never perform, and which often leaves even the professional speaker in a state of collapse. Gladstone was, after one such occasion, found by a friend almost speechless and senseless. But no one suspects the physical torture of the apparently triumphant and jubilant politician.

What can be more delightful than to ravish a crowded opera-house by the wonderful beauty of one's voice? Madame Melba sung some time back with two physicians waiting anxiously behind the scenes and trembling as to the results. The spectators never dreamt of what was passing. Lord Beaconsfield once surprised the House of Lords by rising most unexpectedly to make a speech while another member was on his feet. No one knew the reason, till afterwards, of

HIS ABRUPT INTERRUPTION.

He had taken a strong tonic to brace him up, and finding the effect was quickly passing off, he rose in alarm lest if he waited longer he would not be able to speak at all.

Nobody suspected that Irving's last performance of "Becket" was the effort of a dying man. Mr. Beerbohm Tree has often acted without betraying by a tremor all the time he was upon the stage that he was racked with pain.

One of the most celebrated barristers of the day battled for his clients in an important appeal case some weeks ago in the most vigorous and acute fashion. When he sat down, however, at an interval in the case and found he could not rise again, it became necessary for him to explain to the judges that for days past he had been suffering the most intense agony from the internal complaint. No one would imagine, while listening to Mr. Plowden, the witty and wise London magistrate, that he was hardly ever free from headache.

Royalty has often to "put a brave face" on. The King has frequently defied his physicians and insisted on performing his public engagements when complete rest has been prescribed him. A Sovereign is often "on the rack."

"I AM SO WORN OUT"—wrote Queen Victoria to one of her Ministers, at a time of great anxiety—"that I hardly know whether you will be able to read this letter."

Audiences at places of amusement have little sense of the hidden anguish that may rack a performer. The idea that that person who seems to be always so full of gaiety, and who makes them laugh so prodigiously, can be suffering in any way seems absurd. But the strain is often enormous, and physicians could tell tales if they would of pitiful appeals to them for "something just to take me through this engagement," sometimes for something to carry them through the night's performance.

"People often ignore the amount of physical strain involved in the performance of some of the occupations they most envy," declared Sir Andrew Clark once. "I wonder how many persons have even pondered the fact that a

FOR A BAD MEMORY.

Here is a good memory exercise. Glance into a shop window for one second only, and then try to name all the things displayed in it. At first you will recall only two or three, but this number will rise to thirty with practice. Another good plan is to sit down at the end of the day's work and think of all you have done since morning—where you have been, whom you have met, what you have spent, and so on. In time you will be able to recall exactly what you said and did at a certain hour, and the advantage of possessing this faculty is obvious. Incidentally, it will keep you from wasting your time, for it is not pleasant to remember that you did nothing at all. If you weakness lies in forgetting from such

WIPING OUT THE STIGMA.

A similar policy was pursued in regard to the mutiny of the Hussars at the Curragh Camp, in September, 1887. Of course, in such cases as these, more or less lengthy terms of imprisonment are also inflicted upon the ringleaders, in addition to the wholesale punishment meted out to the disaffected battalions.

Occasionally an offending regiment is exposed to ridicule, a punishment which usually turns out to be extremely effectual. For instance, some time back it was decreed that a crack Austrian corps, which had shown signs of insubordination, were to be deprived of their badges and facings; at the same time, too, their buttons were removed from their tunics, and replaced by hooks and eyes.

This so mortified the men, that during the next campaign they sought to wipe out the stigma by so magnificently heroic a charge that very few escaped alive. Whereupon the Emperor was pleased to decorate the survivors, and to restore to the regiment its ancient insignia.

Ivan the Terrible, again, was once faced by a serious mutiny of no fewer than seven of his line battalions, who refused point-blank to march against Kazan. The Czar rode out alone to meet them, slew with his own hand the ringleader of the mutineers, and then ordered the others, in a voice hoarse with passion, to throw down their arms. Taken by surprise they obeyed. "Now strip," was the next command. Wonderingly, they again complied. "March," shouted the Czar, and mechanically the serried ranks put themselves in motion.

It was a bitterly cold day, but Ivan marched the nude mutineers twenty miles, along roads lined by jeering crowds, and through villages where shame-faced women pointed at them the finger of scorn.

By nightfall, such as survived the ordeal arrived by a circuitous route to the place where they had left their garments and their arms, and were graciously permitted to don the former and repossess themselves of the latter. Next day they set out on the Kazan Expedition with the rest of the army, and throughout that arduous campaign none fought better, or bore hardships more uncomplainingly, than did "Ivan's naked ones," as they were henceforth called.

SUPPRESSION OF THE JANIZARIES.

Probably they were thankful, upon reflection, that their punishment had been no more than it was. For, in those days, and even in times much later, Eastern autocrats showed scant mercy to mutineers.

Take, for instance, the case of the "suppression" of the Janizaries by the Sultan Mahmud II. in 1826, than which no more appalling tragedy is recorded in history. These were picked men, the Sultan's own body-guard, and this, of course, made their disloyalty the blacker. They were, too, the spoiled pets of the Turkish army. They had actually deposed one Sultan, and had habitually dictated, throughout a long reign, to another. But when they tackled Mahmud, they tackled the wrong man.

They broke out into mutiny at eight o'clock on the evening of June 15th. At four o'clock in the morning, on June 16th, the Sultan personally unfurled the sacred green banner of Islam, and by six some twenty thousand of them had been cut to pieces in the narrow streets of Constantinople, by troops and populace. The remnant was disbanded the same afternoon, and sold into slavery. —Pearson's Weekly.

Or that an actor or actress is condemned to make the heartiest meal of the day at one or two o'clock in the morning?"

THE CASTORIA COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Nature's Way Is Best.

The function strengthening and tissue building plan of treating chronic, lingering and obstinate cases of disease as pursued by Dr. Pierce, is following after Nature's plan of restoring health.

He uses natural remedies, that is extracts from native medicinal roots, prepared by processes wrought out by the expenditure of much time and money, without the use of alcohol, and by skillful combination in just the right proportions.

Used as ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Black Cherry-bark, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot and Stone root, specially exert their influence in cases of lung, bronchial and throat troubles, and this "Discovery" is, therefore, a sovereign remedy for bronchitis, laryngitis, chronic coughs, catarrh and kindred ailments.

The above native roots also have the strongest possible endorsement from the leading medical writers, of all the several schools of practice, for the cure not only of the diseases named above but also for indigestion, torpor of liver, or biliousness, obstinate constipation, kidney and bladder troubles and catarrh, no matter where located.

You don't have to take Dr. Pierce's say-so alone as to this; what he claims for his "Discovery" is backed up by the writings of the most eminent men in the medical profession. A request by postal card or letter, addressed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a little book of extracts from eminent medical authorities endorsing the ingredients of his medicines, will bring a little book free that is worthy of your attention if needing a good, safe, reliable remedy of known composition for the cure of almost any old chronic, or lingering malady.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic.

The most valuable book for both men and women is Dr. Pierce's

An Arab Fishing Yarn.

A fishing yarn from Algiers: "Some Arabs were fishing from a boat with lines off the coast when a dolphin seventeen feet long, eleven feet in circumference and weighing four tons swallowed one of the baited hooks and dashed off at a tremendous speed. The fishermen paid out as much line as possible and then made it fast. This brought the dolphin up sharply, but the strain snapped the line. The monster then attacked the boat and capsize it, flinging the fishermen into the water. Other Arabs ashore waited till the dolphin was clear of the men and then killed it with rifles."

The Logical Question.

A little Philadelphia boy was taken by his father for his first visit to the zoo. Stopping before an inclosure, he asked, "Papa, what animal is that?" Reading the sign tacked up to one side, his father responded, "That, my son, is a prong horned antelope." "Kin he blow his horns?" was the question that promptly followed.

SINFUL HABITS IN YOUTH

MAKE NERVOUS, WEAK, DISEASED MEN.

THE RESULT of ignorance and folly in youth, overexertion of mind and body induced by lust and exposure are constantly wrecking the lives and future happiness of thousands of promising young men. Some fade and wither at an early age, at the blossom of manhood, while others are forced to drag out a weary, fruitless and melancholy existence. Others reach maturity, but find no solace or comfort there. The victims are found in all stations of life—the farm, the office, the workshop, the pulpit, the trades and the professions. Nervous Debility and Seminal Weakness are guaranteed cured by our New Method Treatment or No Pay. You run no risk 25 years in Detroit. Bank security.

CURED WHEN ALL ELSE FAILED. No names used without written consent.

"I am 33 years of age and married. When young I led a gay life. Early indiscretions and later excesses made trouble for me. I became weak and nervous. My kidneys became affected and I feared Bright's Disease. Married Life was unsatisfactory and my home unhappy. I tried everything—all failed till I took treatment from Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. Their New Method built me up mentally, physically and sexually. I feel and act like a man in every respect. They treated me six years ago. They are honest, skilful and responsible financially, so why pronounce Quacks and Fakirs when you can be cured by reliable doctors."—W. A. Beiton.

Removed the Growth.

DOUGLAS & CO., NAPANEE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—During year 1890-91 I was troubled with large lump growing on the right side of my neck near the ear. Had consulted several physicians and used everything I could hear of, all to no use. Was told to use

Douglas' Egyptian Liniment.

I did, and before I had used half a twenty-five cent bottle was permanently cured. Since then I have used it for everything where outward application is required; am yet to learn of anything in reason that I cannot cure with it. No man has any idea of its value until he has used it; would not be without it under any circumstance

Respectfully yours,

NATHANIEL W. REID.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A Nice Distinction.

A well known Atlantan has a wife with a sharp tongue. Jones had come home about 2 in the morning rather the worse off for a few highballs. As soon as he opened the door his wife, who was waiting for him in the accustomed place at the top of the stairs, where she could watch his uncertain ascent, started upbraiding him for his conduct. Jones went to bed and when he was almost asleep could hear her still scolding him unmercifully. He dropped off to sleep and awoke after a couple of hours, only to hear his wife remark, "I hope all the women don't have to put up with such conduct as this." "Annie," said Jones, "are you talking again or yet?"

Clams' Eggs.

The clam's eggs are carried by the mother on her gills. When there are fish in the water with them the mother clams discharge the eggs which soon hatch, but if there are no fish they carry the eggs until they decay. The reason of this strange behavior is this: When the eggs are set free in the water they soon hatch and the little ones swim about until they find some fish to which to attach themselves. They live for a time on the mucus of the fish and then drop off, sink to the bottom and form burrows for themselves. This curious semiparasitic life is no doubt a reversion to the habit of some ancient ancestor.

This Was In 1824.

English opinion of the United States in 1824, from the standpoint of the fashionable London set, is shown in the extract from the correspondent of John Whishaw:
 "You must have read some time since in the papers of a few young 'fashionables,' Mr. Stanley (Lord Derby's grandson), Messrs. Wortley and Denison, ministerial members, and La-bouchere, a nephew of Mr. Baring, having sailed for New York with the intention of making a tour of the United States. The scheme was thought very wild and much disapproved of by the west end of the town, and disappointment and disgust were universally predicted."

A Funny Incident.

When Senator Wolcott first went to Colorado he and his brother opened a law office at Idaho Springs under the firm name of "Ed Wolcott & Bro." Later the partnership was dissolved. The future senator packed his few assets, including the sign that had hung outside of his office, upon a burro and started for Georgetown, a mining town farther up in the hills. Upon his arrival he was greeted by a crowd of miners who critically surveyed him and his outfit. One of them looking first at the sign that hung over the pack, then at Wolcott and finally at the donkey ventured, "Say, stranger, which of you is Ed?"

No Guarantee.

A sporting paper recommends a certain way of avoiding the bites of a dog, however savage. All one has to do is to stand perfectly still and hold one's hand out. The dog, says the writer, will take the hand in his mouth, but will not bite it. But what guarantee have we that the dog knows this?—London Globe.

Knew From Experience.
"I say," said a friend the other day, "you are an old hand at it. I have only just got married, and don't understand much about the business, but has a married man any rights left when he once assumes the hymeneal responsibilities?"

"Rights? Yes, lots! He's a right to pay all the bills, to—"

"Hold hard! I know what you mean. Listen, young man. If your bedroom were 200 yards long and lined from the floor to the ceiling with drawers and you wanted a place to stow away a couple of collars, you couldn't find a nook that wasn't full of hairpins, tufts of frizzes, pads, scent boxes, old gloves, powder puffs, rings and things. So just accept the inevitable. Wrap your personal property in an old newspaper or some brown paper and hide the parcel under the bed."

Eskimo Throwing Sticks.

A "throwing stick," "throwing board" or "spear thrower," as it is sometimes called, is a contrivance for casting a javelin or harpoon, which is employed by various savage races, such as the Australians, some South American tribes and especially by the Eskimos, among whom its use is almost universal. Roughly speaking, it is a narrow grooved board a foot or so long, with one end cut into a handle and the other provided with a stud or

When Buchanan Was King.

George Buchanan was a scholar, historian, controversialist and the best Latin poet of his age. Buchanan was tutor to Mary, queen of Scots, and to her son James, afterward James I. of England. One day he caused himself to be made king of Scotland, and this was the way of it: Having observed in James a tendency to too ready acquiescence, he drew up a paper for the royal pupil to sign. James did so at once without having read it. The document happened to be a transfer of the royal authority to Buchanan for fifteen days, and no sooner had the poet got it into his possession than he began to play the monarch, even before the king himself. James thought the man a lunatic until the instrument was produced by which he had signed away his sovereignty. This incident was used by the worthy preceptor to illustrate the day's lesson on the responsibilities of monarchs.

Turkey's Way of Raising Revenue.

The land in all Turkey and her dependencies belongs to the reigning sultan and is only occupied at his will. It is divided among those who wish to cultivate it at a nominal rental of one-fifth of the produce, which goes directly to the crown. Three-fifths more are taken from the lessee on other pretexts, all for the maintenance of the government, the pasha in each district having the authority to lease the ground and collect the taxes, which may be in kind or money. If crops are short, they take four-fifths of all the man has in animals and even in household utensils, sometimes all his possessions, to make up the deficiency which Providence has withheld. Everything that can produce, be it a tree, beast, fowl, worm or the labor of a man and his family, is subject to the four-fifths tax. Those who toil at any labor or trade other than agriculture are taxed also pro rata according to their wages and must pay or go to prison.

Repeat it three times; then, with rising inflection, "Avant, avant, avant!" Finish by repeating the password: "The universe is mine. I am it." The corn will at first look extremely surprised, then wilt and fade beautifully from sight.—New Thought.

BY-LAW NUMBER

OF THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF RICHMOND.

A By-Law to provide for the completing and repairing of certain drainage work provided for by By-Law No. 201 of the said Municipal Corporation in pursuance of the report of the Engineer, as embodied in the said By-Law.

Provisionally adopted the Sixth day of August, A. D. 1906.

WHEREAS pursuant to By-Law No. 201 of the Municipal Corporation of the Township of Richmond constructed that certain drain known as Otter Creek Drain for the benefit of the land therein described.

AND WHEREAS by mandamus issued out of the High Court of Justice the said Municipal Corporation have been directed to repair and maintain the said drain.

AND WHEREAS, thereupon under the terms of the said By-Law Number 201, the said Council has procured an examination to be made by Frederick Fraser Miller, Civil Engineer, being a person competent for such purpose, of the said area proposed to be drained and the means suggested for the drainage thereof, and of other lands and roads liable to assessment under the Municipal Drainage Act, and has also procured specifications and estimates of the drainage work to be made by the said Frederick Fraser Miller and an assessment to be made by him of the lands and roads to be benefited by such drainage work, and of other lands and roads liable for contribution thereto, stating as nearly as he can the proportion of benefit, outlet liability and injurious liability, which, in his opinion will be derived or incurred in consequence of such drainage work by every road and lot or portion of lot, the said assessment so made being the assessment hereinafter by this By-Law enacted to be assessed and levied upon the roads and lots, or parts of lots hereinafter in that behalf specially set forth and described; and the report of the said Frederick Fraser Miller in respect thereof, and of the said drainage work being as follows:

To the Reeve and Council of the Township of Richmond.

Gentlemen:—Re. Otter Creek Drainage Works. I have the honor to report to you that I have examined the Creek and ditches and that the following work will have to be done to make the work conform to the original report, known as By-Law No. 201 of the Township of Richmond.

1. The Creek will have to be thoroughly cleaned out to remove the obstructions to the free flow of the water. These obstructions consist of sand bars, stones, poles, etc. also remains of McLaughlin bridge abutments and a couple of bridges which are not high enough and have not spun enough and will therefore have to be changed so as to give a clear twenty feet of water.

2. Considerable work will have to be done along the road allowance between the 7th and 8th Concessions consisting of about 74 rods of new ditch, a couple of culverts and about 40 rods of old ditch will have to be cleaned out.

3. The ditches along the south and east sides of the swamp from the above named Concession road north easterly and on the north side of the swamp from the spring north easterly will all have to be deepened and widened to become operative.

4. I estimate that the cost of the above work will be $630.00 or at the rate of $1.75 per acre of land benefited as per original By-Law No. 201 in respect to said drainage work and the whole assessment is for benefit liability.

5. I have, in the Schedule hereunder written, assessed the benefit liability of the said drainage works against the several parcels of land liable therefor.

DATED at Napanee this 24th. day of July A. D. 1906.

E. F. MILLER, Engineer.

THE REAL LINCOLN.

He Was Not Homely, and He Was Not Slovenly in Dress.

For many years it has been the fashion to call Mr. Lincoln homely. He was very tall and very thin. His eyes were deep sunken, his skin of a sallow pallor, his hair coarse, black and unruly. Yet he was neither ungraceful nor awkward nor ugly. His large features fitted his large frame, and his large hands and feet were but right on a body that measured six feet four inches. His was a sad and thoughtful face, and from boyhood he had carried a load of care. It is small wonder that when alone or absorbed in thought the face should take on deep lines, the eyes appear as if seeing something beyond the vision of other men and the shoulders stoop as though they, too, were bearing a weight. But in a moment all would be changed. The deep eyes could flash or twinkle merrily with humor or look out from under overhanging brows as they did upon the Five Points children in kindest gentleness. So, too, in public speaking, when his tall body rose to its full height, with head thrown back and his face transfigured with the fire and earnestness of his thought, he would answer Douglas in the high, clear tenor that came to him in the heat of debate, carrying his ideas so far out over listening crowds. And later, during the years of war, when he pronounced with noble gravity the words of his famous addresses, not one in the throngs that heard him could truly say that he was other than a handsome man.

It has been the fashion, too, to say that he was slovenly and careless in his dress. This also is a mistake. His clothes could not fit smoothly on his gaunt and bony frame. He was no tailor's figure of a man, but from the first he clothed himself as well as his means allowed and in the fashion of the time and place.

In reading the grotesque stories of his boyhood, of the tall strapping whose trousers left exposed a length of shin, it must be remembered not only how poor he was, but that he lived on the frontier, where other boys, less poor, were scarcely better clad. In Vandalla the blue jeans he wore were the dress of his companions as well, and later, from Springfield days on, clear through his presidency, his costume was the usual suit of black broadcloth, carefully made and scrupulously neat. He cared nothing for style. It did not matter to him whether the man with whom he talked wore a coat of the latest cut or owned no coat at all. It

STOP, WOMEN!

AND CONSIDER THE
ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, and for many years under her direction, and since her decease, her advice has been freely given to sick women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result.

First letter.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"For eight years I have suffered something terrible every month. The pains are excruciating and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have a severe female trouble, and I must go through an operation if I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please tell me what to do. I hope you can relieve me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and E. Capitol Sts., Washington, D. C.

Second letter

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"After following carefully your advice, and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you my testimonial, that others may know their value and what you have done for me.

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and am entirely well. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and E. Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

The reason for so many failures to cure cases similar to the above is the fact that diseases peculiar to the pelvic organs are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What will relieve catarrh of the head will also relieve catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna relieves these cases simply because it relieves catarrh.

The Bartered Bridegroom.

There are held here many "confidential weddings," as they are called when the ceremony is kept unusually quiet. But sometimes they are too confidential to please the relatives of the parties. The coercion of prospective brides under such circumstances is a proceeding well authenticated in fact and fiction. A kidnaped bridegroom, however, is unusual, though he happened at St. George's not long ago. He was a gentleman of position, and he wished to marry a lady who had nursed him through an illness. There was no cause or just impediment save social rank. The gentleman was determined, and the lady seconded his plans admirably. But the day and the details leaked out, and before the time fixed the bridegroom's male relatives deployed strategically through Mad-plans admirably. But the day and the details leaked out, and before the time fixed the bridegroom's male relatives deployed strategically through Maddox street and surrounded the church. He drove up in a hansom cab. With his eyes fixed on the expectant bride, he prepared to alight. An athletic uncle and a brother sprang forward, thrust him back, with a "Glad to meet you, old fellow" manner that deceived the cabman, who obeyed the quick direction he heard and drove the three away. The lady, with tears in her eyes, went into the vestry. "There will be no wedding," she said. "They've run away with him." And that was the last St. George's heard of them.

Forests' Unnatural Death.

The life of nearly all forests is cut short by fire or by the hand of the lumberman. When a spruce forest is entirely destroyed by fire young spruces do not at once spring up and cover the burned area. The seed bearing cones have been burned, and the spores and seeds of other plants which are readily carried by the wind find their way in first. The task of preparing for the forest is begun again, but this time it is to be a shorter one. The first year after the fire mosses and often tiny flowering plants appear. These are replaced by the fireweed and other flowers whose seeds are provided with hairs so that they reach such places quickly. These are soon joined by raspberries, roses and other bushes. Among these the young seedlings of aspens appear in a very few years. The latter grow rapidly and in a score of years form a low sunny forest. An aspen forest makes a brilliant contrast with the dark green forests of spruce.—St. Nicholas.

Origin of Ascot Races.

When did Ascot races begin? They are mentioned in the first "Racing Calendar," published in 1727, and the usual statement is that they were founded by the Duke of Cumberland, uncle of George III. But an entry in the accounts of the master of the horse in 1712 suggests that they were founded by Queen Anne on Aug. 6, 1711. The truth, no doubt, is that Ascot races, like many other august institutions, gradually developed from a germ, so that it is difficult to say when they really began. At any rate, they were quite the sort of thing that enthusiast of the turf, Queen Anne, would have founded. She was a thorough Stuart in this passion. It was her great-grandfather, James I., who encouraged, if he did not establish, horse racing in Scotland and popularized it in England.—London Chronicle.

Keen Sense of Humor.

"There is nothing like a sense of humor," said a naval officer, according to the Philadelphia Bulletin. "In a woman, in a soldier, in a sailor, in a clerk, a sense of humor is a help and a blessing through life. At the same time even a sense of humor may exist in excess. I, for my part, shouldn't care to have so great a sense of humor as a British soldier I once heard about. This soldier was ordered to be flogged. During the flogging he laughed continually. The lash was laid on all the harder, but under the rain of blows the soldier laughed.

"What are you laughing at?" the sergeant finally asked.
"Why," the soldier chuckled, "I'm the wrong man."

A Story of Ole Bull.

A curious tale of Ole Bull is told in a book on violins and violinists. It seems that in 1831, being then twenty-one years of age, the famous violinist wandered to Paris. The cholera was raging and Malibran singing. He went to hear her, and his landlord decamped with his possessions, including his violin. He was speedily reduced to extremity. During the last dinner that he was able to pay for he made the acquaintance of a remarkable man. To this stranger Ole Bull confided his miseries. At the conclusion the stranger said abruptly, "Well, I will do something for you if you have courage and 5 francs." "I have both," said Bull. "Then go to Frascati's tonight at 10 o'clock, pass through the first room, go into the second, where they play, rouge et noir, and when a new tallie begins put your 5 francs on rouge and leave it there." Bull did as directed, and when his 5 francs had become 400 he took them up after an episode with a woman who attempted to take them. Red continued to win, and had he left his money longer he would have won an independent sum. The stranger, who was present as his elbow, was Vidocq, the French detective, already a European celebrity.

FEMININE FOOT COPIES No. 1.

"ONE OF THE 14"

LAST

Dolly Varden Lasts are exact copies of Perfect Feminine Feet.

How did we copy them?

We scoured Europe and North America for Perfect Feminine Feet. Where permitted, we took plaster of Paris moulds, from which gutta percha casts were made. The casts were then carved into wood lasts. Thus we procured exact copies.

How did we classify them and decide on a certain number of basic foot types?

With the assistance of notable orthopedic surgeons we studied with infinite pains the lines and shapes of all the thousands of lasts we had made, and found that in groups the lasts were almost alike, so we determined that they could be divided into a number of classes.

Example: We found what we call the New England class, where the lasts were all long, slim, low instep, flat arch; the Western North American class, where the shapes were short, wide and thick, medium instep and arch; the Southern class, where the forms were short, slim, high instep, high arch, high heel and so on.

We then made one composite last from the last of each class. These composites we call the Dolly Varden "Feminine Foot Types."

Our agent in your city has a complete stock of Dolly Varden types, and will gladly fit you with the type best suited to the shape of your foot. Purchasers or investigators equally welcome. In the States and Canada at same price—$3.50 and $4.00. Every pair Goodyear Welted. (To be continued.)

GOOD WHEAT CROP IN BRITAIN.

KAI WANG;

A TALE OF SOUTHERN CHINA.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

For a brief interval there was a dead silence in that weird place.

Lord Rackett still gripped the ancient lantern, and he raised it so that the light would fall fully upon the party before them.

Eye looked into eye, and the eagerness manifested was but an index to the soul.

No one seemed to breathe; Avis was like a figure turned to stone.

The inmate of the dungeon was ragged and unkempt; his beard had not been trimmed or combed these many weeks, and the absence of light and nourishing food had given him a gaunt, haggard look, decidedly at variance with the matty attire and well-groomed appearance of a gentleman like Dr. Evans.

Larry was lost in doubt and fear—Larry, who had believed it would never be possible to deceive him with regard to this comrade in whose genial company he had spent so many years of his eventful life, and who was dearer to him than a brother.

Not so the wife.

Trust eyes of love to see through the disguise of prison life and neglect. No sooner had she beheld the gaunt figure than she knew him, and that she failed to immediately cry out was due more to her emotion than any lingering doubt.

All these dreadful weeks she had believed herself bereft of this kind and valiant husband, and had almost learned to consider herself what she seemed—Dr. Jack's widow. And now, to suddenly see him in the flesh, this man who was her king, her lover, her all in all; whose equal, in her mind at least, the world had never known—to meet him thus with hardly a word of warning caused a fearful shock.

Dr. Jack was staring at them in deep perplexity. So well had Kai Wang managed their disguise that it was impossible for him to discover their identity.

Had he once turned his attention to that worthy, he might have known him; but something about the smallest figure had caught his attention, and he stood as though riveted to the spot, watching the brightest eyes, watching a pair of almost nerveless arms reaching up toward him, while lips parted, and from between them came a cry, almost a sob of joy:

"Jack! Oh, my husband!"

Then it was that a great light flashed over his soul. There was an awakening that electrified him, body and mind. Heart spoke to heart, amid the glad paeon of rejoicing over the lost that was found.

"Avis, my darling girl! Avis here to rescue her poor Jack!" he exclaimed.

It was an affecting scene when she flew to him and wrapped her loving arms around his neck, while he pressed her to his heart.

Even Lord Rackett had to wink violently to disperse the briny tears that began to gather.

Jack was but a shadow of his former stalwart self. Weeks of rigid prison fare had robbed him of flesh and strength, but the old determination and courage glowed in his eyes and was expressed in his every stroke looking toward escape.

Some men rise above circumstances and environment, and seem at home everywhere.

Dr. Jack possessed this peculiarly enviable quality to the highest degree.

Still, however pleasant, this was not business, and there were serious questions awaiting their attention; questions upon the answer of which hung their destinies, their lives.

It was a grand and glorious thing that they had been thus enabled to find Dr. Jack, and all honor must be given to Kai Wang for the wonderful manner in which he had led them on to success; but the end was not yet in sight.

They were still in the dungeon under the great Imperial palace of Peking, and safely could only be found somewhere beyond the walls of the Forbidden City.

To accomplish this flight without delay was the subject that now engrossed Kai Wang's intelligent attention.

They saw him turn and glide toward the door, and Larry decided that he had suddenly remembered the ponderous key in the lock.

Why he should utter such a shrill scream and dart forward so suddenly, just as a cat pounces on a nimble-footed rat, might have been a mystery to them, only that Larry caught a fleeting glimpse of a mocking yellow face beyond the opening, which was almost immediately shut out as the ponderous door crashed shut.

They saw Kai Wang reach it, and, clutching the clumsy knob, pull with the energy of a madman; pull until the veins stood out upon his yellow brow like blue whipcords, and the sinews in his arms seemed almost ready to snap.

But, alas, the ungenerous door refused to respond to his wooing, and remained fast. Evidently that treacherous key, turned by another hand on the outside, had gotten in its deadly work, and they were trapped.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

It had been a revelation to Larry to witness this excess of physical energy on the part of the Chinese statesman and friend of the viceroy, Li Hung Chang.

He had usually been so sphinxlike and impassive, even under the most aggravating circumstances, that when he thus cast aside his mask to attack the resisting door with so much zeal, Larry almost felt like throwing aloft the Chinese winter hat which adorned his head, and giving a lusty "huzza."

It was an inspiring sight to him.

Kai Wang was evidently nearer the point of being "rattled" than ever before in his long and eventful career.

Perhaps he had had his nerves shaken by the sight of that sleeping prisoner of the other dungeon, and was hardly himself.

Avis had witnessed this odd break on the part of their guide with no little wonder, mixed with consternation.

She had grown so accustomed to placing unlimited faith in Kai Wang that his sudden and unexpected repulse sent a chill over her system.

Involuntarily a low cry of alarm burst from her lips as the horror of the situation made itself felt. Her nerves had been wrought up to a desperate pitch, and this disaster capped the climax.

Even bold Lord Rackett felt a thrill of actual dismay when he grasped the might be required for such an undertaking; but the chances of a fall were always present, and even the remote prospect of such a catastrophe was quite enough to awaken a feeling of alarm in the little man's breast.

He had forgotten, however, with whom he had to deal.

The magician had not deserted them. Something came down from above, something that uncoiled like a great snake, and struck at Larry's feet.

"A rope!" he piped, with intense delight permeating his raspy voice.

And a rope it was, sure enough.

Where Kai Wang had secured it was a blank mystery to one and all.

He might have discovered it providentially in the apartment above, or, as seemed more probable, have unwound it from his own person, where it had been securely hidden under his flowing robe. At any rate, there it was, apparently as good a hempen rope as the whole province of Chili could boast, and in their eyes the finest in the world.

Dr. Jack clutched it with an exclamation of delight.

It was as though his prayer was answered.

"Larry, do you go up, and then our friend, Lord Rackett. Avis shall try while you hold the line above, in case of accident."

They grasped his meaning, and leaving him in the act of securing the noose about his wife, started to climb the ladder which Jack had rudely cut in the wall.

Larry came near losing his nerve near the top, when his foot slipped, and he could not see an inch beyond his nose; a tumble at this time would have been doubly unfortunate, since Plympton must have shared in the disaster, being just below.

Ere anything serious resulted from the slip, an arm shot down from the blackness above, and a set of long fingers hooked upon the little man's garments just back of his neck.

Pressure being brought to bear from above, Larry was safely landed, and Lord Rackett quickly joined him.

The latter had been shrewd enough to rely to some extent upon the rope, believing Kai Wang must have made it fast above.

Avis gave them less trouble than they had expected, though her husband below did not breathe easy until the Chinese-clad figure had quite vanished from view, and he heard the welcome signal from Larry that all was well.

There remained only himself.

It was high time he was going, for a confusion of noises out in the corridor portended the speedy arrival of a detachment of soldiers, probably aroused by the stunning report of the escaped guard.

Coolly, Jack knotted the lantern to the rope, and sent it aloft.

He needed no assistance in traversing the route he had fashioned with his own hands, since every minute portion of it was as familiar to his touch as his own features.

The clamor was now at the door.

Jack was near the top and proceeding as calmly as though merely passing up to continue his labors above.

A glance upward had assured him that the others knew enough to extinguish the light, having evidently heard the shouts below.

And as he climbed, a voice came stealing down to him from the void aloft, a voice so filled with anxiety and devotion that it thrilled him through and through, even though it only uttered his name:

"Jack! oh, Jack!"

The door of the dungeon was burst open and a heterogeneous mass of men pushed in, who bore flaming flambeaux—men who were armed with nondescript weapons, after the manner of the Chinese Imperial Guard, and who seemed burning with a mad desire for an opportunity to slay, according to the tenets of their religion.

That spectacle, as seen by those above, was one never to be forgotten.

Again Kai Wang lowered his strong arm, so that Dr. Jack might take no

The World's Yield To Be The Largest on Record.

Two of Britain's crops this year have failed. In Ireland so much of the potato harvest has been devastated by blight that it is feared that the Government will again have to come to the aid of the people, if absolute destitution is not to prevail; and in the hop-producing counties of England the shortage of the crop owing to the blight amounts to 22,750 tons.

Not only has the blight been responsible for the destruction of Ireland's potato harvest, but the recent torrential rain has caused disease to become prevalent throughout the western districts. The other crops have suffered in a similar degree from storms, and the late hay crop is lying almost rotten in the fields.

In North Wales—notably in Anglesey and Carnarvonshire—scores of acres of potatoes have been ruined by blight, and strenuous efforts are being made to check the ravages of the potato disease in Sussex. Blight, however, has been detected in new fields in the other potato-producing counties of the British Isles.

Wheat and barley appear in each division of Great Britain to be over average, while oats are slightly over average in all divisions with the exception of the North of England and the East of Scotland. Mangolds generally promise better than turnips. The hay crop is reported as beneficial in the Eastern, North-Eastern, South-Eastern, and East Midland counties, while the yield in the West Midland and South-Western counties will barely reach an average. In the North and North-Western counties, Wales and Scotland, the crop is distinctly over average.

It is estimated this year that the wheat yield of the world will be the largest on record, and it is expected that at least 360,000,000 quarters will be harvested.

PROOF.

Wife: "Jack, I believe there are thieves in the house!"

Husband: "Let us go down and show them your new bonnet, dear, and they won't waste any time looking for money here."

"A good medicine requires little advertising. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil gained the good name it now enjoys, not through elaborate advertising, but on its great merits as a remedy for bodily pains and ailments of the respiratory organs. It has carried its fame with it wherever it has gone, and it is prized at the apothecaries as well as at home. Dose small, effect sure."

"I saw a queer thing the other day," said the story-teller. "It was a duck swimming across a pond and a cat sitting on its tail." "Oh, nonsense," cried the audience, incredulously. "How could a duck swim across a pond and a cat on its tail?" "Nevertheless," said the story-teller, "it's perfectly true. I should explain, however, that the cat was sitting on its tail on a wall."

stalwart self. Weeks of rigid prison fare had robbed him of flesh and strength, but the old determination and courage glowed in his eyes and was expressed in his every stroke looking toward escape.

They could not have crushed that in a score of years. When it left him, life would go also.

How tenderly she passed her hand over his sunken and bearded cheeks, uttering little cries of dismay because he was so thin and showed such marks of acute physical suffering.

But his laugh was almost as hearty as of yore.

"A mere trifle, dearest, and which gives me no concern whatever. Once out of here, I'll soon recuperate. But who are these friends? Surely I should know that figure, despite the dress. It can be no other than Larry, faithful old Larry! God bless him! Give me your hand, my dear boy. How glad I am to see you in flesh Heaven only knows. Many times I have feared that you had perished on that fearful night; and I cursed myself for having led you into such a trap."

By this time Larry had found his voice. He was dancing about the other as though too full of electricity to remain still, clutching Jack's hand in both of his. Avis held the other—and shaking it repeatedly in a manner that came from the heart.

"They couldn't do it, Jack, dear boy! Takes more than a mob of Black Flags to down me, dye know. Yes, we got away with our lives, although, by Jove, I've been laid on the shelf for weeks ever since. And the papers went with us, by Jove. They're safe in the hands of the British Consul at Canton, safe from Petoskey and his crowd. Avis took them here herself."

"And I had the personal pleasure of locking them up," said Plympton, pushing forward.

Dr. Jack stared at him and shook his head.

"I've heard that voice before, but in such toggery I wouldn't know my brother, if I had one."

"And you have no reason to remember that voice with anything but scorn and hatred; but that was all in the past, Evans. I have been trying to wipe out the miserable recollection to the best of my ability. Your wife has forgiven me and placed her confidence in me, and I hope to receive your hand also."

Then Jack knew.

The past unrolled like a scroll.

He remembered how, urged on by a mad passion, this man had endeavored to balk his big game, and even steal his wife, away off to the other side of the world, in Chili. Still, bitter as were the thoughts thus stirred, he realized that Lord Rackett's repentance must be most sincere, else he would never have risked his life in the effort to save his old-time rival.

Besides, there was a bluff heartiness in his speech and manner that went far toward winning the doctor's heart.

"Ah! he has been a friend, indeed," said Avis, softly in his ear.

"The best of good fellows, with whose help I was enabled to save my fair cousin from the Russian's junk at Canton," blabbed Larry, quite unconscious of any conceit in his words.

This capped the climax with Jack.

"My wife's friends are mine, and I am right glad to shake hands with you, Plympton."

Perhaps he remembered that the last time they came together was after a railroad wreck, when Lord Rackett, finding him wounded, assisted him up the bank and to a place of safety.

Then came Kai Wang, gravely extending his long-nailed fingers, and bending over as though salaaming before a potentate, while his sallow features were convulsed in a broad grin, such as Larry had never before seen upon his countenance.

It was a reception, in fact, and Dr. Jack, ragged and gaunt and unkempt, did the honors with as much éclat as though dressed in a claw-hammer coat and with a diamond in his immaculate shirt-front.

Unvoluntarily a low cry of alarm burst from her lips as the horror of the situation made itself felt. Her nerves had been wrought up to a desperate pitch, and this disaster capped the climax.

Even bold Lord Rackett felt a thrill of actual dismay when he grasped the situation and realized what a fearful condition of affairs had arisen.

It must indeed be a peculiar nature that would not have experienced a sinking sensation after contemplating the disaster.

Here they had come to rescue Evans from durance vile, with the result that they now shared his prison.

Chinese vengeance is not a thing to be lightly defied, and woe to that soul so wretched and unfortunate as to fall beneath the displeasure of native forces, once they gain the upper hand, for no more vindictive or cruel tyranny exists.

Strange as it might appear, the one who would be expected least to grapple with the new and overwhelming problem that had so suddenly arisen was the first to gain the mastery over alarming fears.

Perhaps that cry from Avis pierced his loving heart, and stirred into action the sluggish life currents that had lain dormant so long.

At last Dr. Jack was himself again, a man born to command, whom no difficulties could daunt; fertile in resources, bold in their successful application.

These weeks of privation in the palace dungeon, laboring under an uncertainty as to his fate, had evidently not quelled this wonderful spirit in the least.

"It is bad enough," he said; "but it might be worse."

Larry breathed easier.

He had an inspiration that already Dr. Jack was in a fair way to grasp the situation. When circumstances were not to his liking, he had a way of controlling them, just as Benjamin Franklin harnessed the lightning, or Morse adapted electricity to mercantile needs.

There was so much of calm confidence in his manner that Larry's sinking spirits were instantly buoyed up.

He waited eagerly to hear more.

Kai Wang, once more cold and impassive outwardly, however the fires of human passion raged within, at once approached Dr. Jack.

He was perhaps the only one who intuitively guessed what the latter meant by his confident remark that the case was not so bad as it might appear.

"You made hole up yonder, excellent comrade. When will it be done, so we, too, may take our departure from this ill-conditioned place?" he asked, in his pleasant Chinese fashion.

"I am happy to say it is already completed, and I meant to use it this night, but was deterred from doing so by the unusual tramping of many feet in the apartments above."

Again Larry felt a mad desire to leap up and crack his heels together with sheer joy.

How the clouds were dispersed when a genius took charge of affairs.

No doubt the little man had an exalted idea of Jack's powers, since he looked upon the doctor as a wizard, whose touch could transform baser metals into gold, and accomplish miracles; but experience had led him to lean upon such a companion in time of trouble with full confidence as to the result.

Then the prisoner of the dungeon set to work to show what he had accomplished in the time of his incarceration.

The magnitude of his work astonished them all, and Kai Wang, seizing hold of the interstices in the wall, ran aloft with the agility of a native juggler.

He vanished from their eyes above.

Jack, meanwhile, seemed to be wrestling with some knotty problem, and from the serious manner in which his eyes rested upon his devoted wife, it was evident that Avis must be the main cause of his concern.

The fact struck Larry suddenly, and he felt actually weak under it. How were they to get Avis out of the dungeon? Possibly she might climb as well as the best of them, for he had known her to possess more nerve than burning with a mad desire for an opportunity to slay, according to the tenets of their religion.

That spectacle, as seen by those above, was one never to be forgotten.

Again Kai Wang lowered his strong arm, so that Dr. Jack might take no chances.

Meanwhile, those below were running around the dungeon, peering into every corner, overturning the humble pallet, even smashing the crockery water-bowls, as though in fear lest the objects of their search should have taken refuge therein.

Men who make diabolical noises to scare away the unseen demons of the air, and who burn mock paper money by tons in order to conciliate the Fung Shuy, or spirits of the dead, would not be apt to prove themselves above such a belief.

From their cries of chagrin, however, it became evident that they had met with a grievous disappointment in finding the place devoid of human occupancy.

As luck would have it, some smart Aleck chanced to discover the ladder cut in the wall, and, raising his eyes, was just in time to see a pair of human legs dangling in the air, as Dr. Jack made his hurried exit.

His discovery was quickly communicated to his fellows, and then ensued a council of war.

Truth to tell, none of these bray warriors had a very determined itching to climb up that odd ladder, fearful lest the resourceful American might be lying in wait at the top ready to lap them on the head as fast as they came within reach of his arm.

Perhaps this lull in matters offensive might be of considerable importance to the fugitives, since a minute of time is often worth a fortune in cash.

NEWS BY MAIL FROM IRELAND'S SHORES.

Happenings in the Emerald Isle of Interest to Irish-Canadians.

Six young men went out for a sail on the River Shannon, near Limerick, on Sunday, the 15th ult. When three miles west of the city the boat was struck by a squall and capsized, with the result that five of the occupants were drowned.

The cemetery adjoining St. Patrick's Memorial church, Dublin, has been much beautified by a magnificent cross of Celtic design, erected by the family of the late Mr. Hugh Crickard, Downpatrick.

In the removal by death of the Rev. Thomas Cromie, of Bessbrook, the Irish Presbyterian church loses one of its oldest and ablest men in the ministerial rank. A year ago he resigned from the active work of the ministry after fifty years' faithful service.

Replying to a deputation from the Irish Forestry Society, headed by Lord Castletown, the Chief Secretary for Ireland said that Ireland suffered more from want of trees than any other country he was familiar with. There seemed to be good reason for something being done with regard to forests in Ireland, and he thought the Government would agree to some scheme. What was wanted, however was positive, definite and scientific information on the subject.

In a case before the King's Bench in Dublin, it was declared that it had been found impossible to serve writs on five tenants for non-payment of rent, and the process-server gave a vivid account of his experiences in the attempt. He was, he said, unable to serve the tenants personally, owing to the presence of a number of people who appeared to be hostile, and who followed and threatened him with violence. When he came near the house of one of them about 300 men gathered on the hills adjoining. They began to beat drums and blow horns when he came in sight, and about twenty of them ran to meet him, and shouted that they would catch him and take his wife from him. He was at the time riding a good horse and galloped quickly away at about 15 miles an hour, the mob following him for the distance of about two miles and a half. He believed he would have lost his life but for that fact.

Mrs. Ellen McIverney has died near Tuilla, County Clare, at the age of 112 years.

A memorial statute to the late Marquis of Dufferin was unveiled at Belfast by the Marquis of Londonderry. The figures on either side of the pedestal represent India and Canada.

In the Nisi Prius Court, Dublin, an action was heard in which Miss Matilda McKinley sought to recover £300 damages from John Porterfield, farmer, of Croghan, Lifford. Plaintiff alleged that defendant assaulted and beat her, and violently attempted to kiss her. Defendant denied the charges. The alleged assault took place in a grocery establishment at Strabane, Porterfield. It is stated, walked into the shop and told plaintiff that he would kiss her. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, with £125 damages. A stay of execution was granted on the lodgment of £80.

Negotiations are proceeding between the tenants of the Marquis of Ely's Fermanagh estate and the landlord's agents for the purchase of their holdings. It is stated that about seven hundred tenants are willing to pay 23½ years' purchase, but it appears a hitch has occurred regarding the sporting rights which the tenants refuse to concede to the Marquis of Ely.

SUFFERING WOMEN.

Need Just the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

From girlhood to middle life the health and happiness of every woman depends upon her blood. If her blood is poor and watery she becomes weak, languid, pale and nervous. If her blood supply is irregular she suffers from headaches and backaches, and other unspeakable distress which only women know. At every stage of woman's life Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are her best friend, because they actually make the rich, red blood which gives help and strength and tone to every organ of the body. They help a woman just when nature makes the greatest demand upon her blood supply. Mrs. H. Gagnon, who for twenty years has been one of the best known residents of St. Rochs, Que., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a blessing to me. I was weak, worn out and scarcely able to drag myself about. I suffered from headaches and dizziness, my appetite was poor, and to attempt housework left me utterly worn out. I slept badly at night, and what sleep I got did not refresh me. For nearly three years I was in this condition, and was constantly taking medicine, but found no benefit from it. One of my neighbors, who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with much benefit, advised me to try them. I did so, and the whole story is told in the words 'I am well again.' There are times yet when I take the pills for they seem to me a guarantee against the troubles from which so many women suffer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills don't act on the bowels. They contain just the elements that actually make new blood, and strengthen the nerves. That's why they cure anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism, lumbago, headaches, backaches and heart palpitation, and skin diseases like pimples and eczema. That is why they are the greatest help in the world for growing girls who need new blood and for women who are troubled with irregular health. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co.

A SPLENDID TRIP.

The best way to begin a trip to the Old World is to take the White Star Line steamers from New York or Boston to the Mediterranean ports. For those who enjoy a sea voyage, this trip cannot be equalled in interest and variety and in the quality of the accommodation afforded by the magnificent boats of this line. The inexpensiveness of the trip when the above points are considered is not the least interesting feature to be considered in planning a European trip. The sum of six dollars a day will pay for every item on a fifteen day trip in the best first-cabin accommodations. The meals provided are the equal of those to be had in the finest hotels in the world, and the service in every particular is absolutely beyond criticism. There are a thousand and one little kindnesses for the passengers' comfort. A fine orchestra is on every steamer, and everything is done to cater to the best class of passenger trade. The steamers themselves are all large, comfortable boats, with unusual deck room for promenading and exercise, and are particularly well ventilated, and therefore suited to the warmer southern voyages.

Passengers are afforded an opportunity of spending a day at the Azores, at Gibraltar, and at Palermo, and Naples, where they may disembark or continue on to Genoa. Even in the heated months this trip is most enjoyable. The weather is particularly pleasant and the sea always smooth in July and August, and no better way can be found of spending a month's vacation than just the trip over and back in one of these floating palaces. In the winter there is no way the equal of this for reaching the heart of Europe or getting to Egypt or the Far East.

HIS POSITION IN THE MATTER.

"Gracious!" exclaimed the fond wife, coming in her husband's den and finding him smoking his pipe and reading. "This room is thick with smoke. I don't see how you can stand to sit in here." "You can't?" responded the brutal husband. "Well, I don't stand to sit in here; I sit to sit in here. Did you think you had married a freak?"

It is said that this was the first time in their married life that she slammed a door on leaving him.

No person should go from home without a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial in their possession, as change of water, cooking, climate, etc., frequently brings on summer complaint and there is nothing like being ready with a sure remedy at hand, which oftentimes saves great suffering and frequently valuable lives. This Cordial has gained for itself a widespread reputation for affording prompt relief from all summer complaints.

"Tommy," said a father to his son, "have you been at those six peaches I put in the cupboard?" Father, said Tommy, looking into his eyes, "I have not touched one." "Then how is it your mother found five peach stones in your bedroom, and there is only one left on the plate?" "That," said Tommy, as he dashed wildly for the door, "is the one I didn't touch."

AN INGENIOUS TRICK.

Clever Woman Swindler With a Taste for Diamonds Secures Some.

A story of an amazingly audacious swindle comes from Madrid, Spain. The heroine is a handsome, elegantly-dressed woman, who, the other day, visited a specialist in mental diseases on behalf of her husband, who, she said, was a sufferer from religious mania. Having explained the case it was arranged that she should return in about an hour with the afflicted husband. The next scene of action was a jeweller's shop in another part of the city, where she selected diamonds to the value of $5,000 on the understanding that she would buy them if her husband approved. Would someone accompany her home in a cab, and the money would be paid immediately?

A trusted clerk was sent, and with him the lady drove back to the doctor's home. In an ante-room she took the stones "just to show them to her husband," then, entering with sublime assurance the doctor's study, she informed the specialist that her husband was now in the ante-room and ready to be examined. Leaving a visiting card, the lady took her departure, and the doctor, bidding the supposed patient enter, proceeded at his leisure to ask professional questions.

The jeweller's man was puzzled at first, but soon he realized that he had been made the victim of a clever fraud. The doctor, however, interpreted his agitation as caused by his complaint, and when after two hours matters were finally explained the lady impostor had vanished with her spoils without leaving any trace.

CARELESS CORRESPONDENTS.

Valuable Packets Go Through British P. O. Without Addresses.

Some remarkable facts in connection with the carelessness of the public in the despatch of letters are disclosed in the fifty-second annual report of the British Postmaster-General of the post-office for the year ended March 31.

The number of undelivered packets handled during the year was 27,099,174. The number of registered letters and letters containing property sent through the post with insufficient addresses was 320,041. These letters contained £16,887 in cash and notes, and £656,845 in bills, cheques, money orders, etc., and stamps. The number of letters with valuable contents posted with no address at all was 4,599. The contents including £2,000 in cash and bank notes, £9,766 in various forms of remittance. One unaddressed letter contained cheques to the value of £2,500.

The number of insufficiently-addressed letters with valuable contents shows an increase of 4,000 on the previous year, and the value of the property thus entrusted to the mercy of the post-office by a careless public has increased by no less than £33,000.

A Recognized Regulator.—To bring the digestive organs into symmetrical working is the aim of physicians when they find a patient suffering from stomachic irregularities, and for this purpose they can prescribe nothing better than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which will be found a pleasant medicine of surprising virtue in bringing the refractory organs into subjection and restoring them to normal action, in which condition only can they perform their duties properly.

MUCH APPENDICITIS.

Increase is Attributed in Part to Bore-acid Acid.

Since the year 1891 the number of deaths from appendicitis in the London Hospital has steadily increased. In the former year there were two deaths, in 1894 twelve, in 1897 seventeen, in 1899 twenty-seven, in 1902 thirty-nine, in 1903 forty-nine, in 1904 sixty-three, and last year fifty-six.

In the course of the report on the subject Dr. D. L. Thomas, medical officer of health of Stepney, London, enlarges upon the detrimental effect of boric acid, which is extensively added to food. This, he says, may predispose to appendicitis from invasion of the testinal wall by the bacillus coli communis. The evil effects of drastic purgatives are also referred to.

NOT HIS STYLE.

"Did you ever indulge in piscatorial excursions, Mr. Oldbody?"

"No, I don't take to them new fashioned sports. A fishing party is good enough for me."

"You say, Mr. Timmid," said the girl, in a low, thoughtful, this-is-a-serious-matter sort of tone, "that you have loved me for five years, and have never dared to tell me so until to-night?" "Yes," he replied. "Well, I cannot be your wife. A man who has no more courage than that would feign to be asleep while a burglar stole his baby's shoes."

Mother (horrified): "Oh, Bobby, what will your father say when he sees that you have smashed his shaving mug and broken the front gate?" Bobby: "Well, mamma, I don't think I would like to repeat it before you."

Good Digestion Should Wait on Appetite.—To have the stomach well is to have the nervous system well. Very delicate are the digestive organs. "That's just it, ma'am. He is a good fellow. He is so obliging that he just wore his finger off pointing out the scenery along the line."

CZAR'S SERVANTS IN PLOT

Bombs Conveyed Into the Palace at Peterhoff.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Express says that half a dozen employees of the Imperial household were involved in a plot to kill the Czar, including two former servants of the ex-Czarina and an officer of the late Gen. Treppoff's staff. Gen. Treppoff's precautions at the palace baffled the repeated attempts of the Terrorists until six weeks ago, when they gained over a servant. Rapid progress was made when the precautions were relaxed after the Czar's departure, and bombs were conveyed to the palace, ready for use after his Majesty returned by the officer above referred to, who has since committed suicide. He was an unpopular member of the household, and fearing dismissal after Gen. Treppoff's death he accepted a large bribe from the Terrorists. The latter ordered their agents to carry out the execution of the Czar and Ministers at Gen. Treppoff's funeral. Those who have been arrested doubtless will be summarily executed after a secret trial by court-martial.

SHOT WRONG GENERAL.

A despatch from Warsaw says: Gen. Nicolaieff, of the artillery, was assassinated here on Wednesday. He was walking on Wielka Street when he was surrounded by five revolutionists and shot dead. The murderers escaped. Gen. Nicolaieff was erroneously thought to be a member of the field court-martial.

THE ONLY REMEDY.

A despatch from Paris says: The Temps publishes an interview with Count Tolstoi, who said that the real cause of the trouble in Russia was the absence of authority, but that of the Government, supported by armed force, and of free obedience of the citizens to the law. The only remedy was a moral union. He scoffed at the attempts of the revolutionary politicians, saying: "Let us have no foreign constitutions. What suits England, where only 10 per cent. of the population are peasants, will not suit Russia, where the peasants number 90 per cent. of the entire population. Let us cut out revolution to our own measurements and leave the chatterboxes of the Duma to discuss learnedly constitutions made in England, France, and Germany."

TERRORIST MANIFESTO.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: A violent Terrorist manifesto has been issued, decreeing the removal of the Czar and all the cowardly numerous autocracy. It declares that these are the enemies of the people and must be mercilessly annihilated. The manifesto was called forth by the execution of Zenaide Konopliankova, the girl who assassinated Gen. Mien.

The manifesto follows:

"The die has been cast. One thing remains—annihilate mercilessly all enemies of the people. There must be life for life, death for death, cent for cent. With the illuminating memory of Konopliankovo to guide them, all true Russians must strike terror to the hearts of the executioners."

TERRORIST EXECUTED.

A despatch from Odessa says: The first field court-martial was held here on Thursday, and a terrorist Jew named Tarle was sentenced to death and executed for the killing of a policeman. The court consisted of six officers of the army, whose names are kept secret. Tarle was in a pitiful condition when brought before the court from loss of blood from five wounds received before he was arrested. After being sentenced he was carried to the prison yard and tied to a post. His last words were curses and expressions of contempt for his captors. "You assassins," he cried, "you believe that with your organized attacks and field courts you can shoot down the whole of 'Young Russia.' But be assured that there are bombs and revolvers enough to deliver this unfortunate country from your blood-stained hands. Now fire." Three volleys were fired and Tarle fell dead.

NUMEROUS ARRESTS.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: Arrests in connection with the plot against the Czar continue. The number of persons imprisoned is large, and others are being sought. The Bourse Gazette says that searchlights have been installed at Peterhoff, and are being used seaward and landward after dark to prevent surprises.

The suburb of St. Petersburg adjoining the Narva gate was shaken on Friday by the explosion of a powerful bomb, which was thrown by one of three well dressed men, and which tore an enormous hole in the ground and broke all the windows in the vicinity. There was no loss of life. The bomb throwers disappeared before the arrival of the police. As the bomb was thrown in an open space from which the throwers had previously warned away all passers by and cab drivers, the event is explainable only on the supposition that the bomb had been intended for use in connection with the Terrorist plot which was discovered at Peterhoff at the time of Gen. Treppoff's funeral, and that the conspirators, finding that the police were hot upon their trail, decided to be rid of incriminating evidence.

promote the general health, to increase the deposits of fat in the skin tissues of the face, will help to obliterate lines and wrinkles, and restore firmness and beauty to the skin.

TREATMENT OF VARICOSE VEINS.

People suffering from them should avoid much standing, should rest the legs frequently by lying down, and, when sitting, should, if possible, raise the feet; but moderate walking exercise should not be given up, as the muscular action of the leg in walking is useful in preventing the tendency to enlarged veins. When the veins are

The household property in these was all saved, but buildings were totally destroyed. These were owned by Mr. T. R. White, and were not insured.

FATAL COLLISION NEAR NAPANEE.

Eastbound G. T. R. Express Runs Into Freight Train.

A despatch from Napanee says: Devotion to duty on the part of Engineer Frank Blaine, which cost him his life, in all probability saved the lives of many passengers on the Montreal express, No. 2, which left the Toronto Union Station about 10.45 on Thursday night. The fast express collided head-on with a freight train about a mile west at this town on Friday morning. The passengers agree that had not the engineer of the express stayed at his post and applied the air brakes, at the sacrifice of his own life, the Waukegan and Azilda disasters would most likely have been repeated on the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway. Poor Blaine's hand was severed from his crushed and mangled body, and was found on the brake lever when the wrecking crew drew the powerful engines apart from their deadly embrace.

Although the passenger engine's tender mounted the baggage car and the baggage car telescoped the first day coach, with the exception of the engineer's death, the casualties were not serious. Fireman Edward Miron, of Belleville, who was on the passenger engine and jumped in time to save his life, had his knee-joint and back badly wrenched. Engineer Charles Orrill and Fireman David Young, both of Belleville, and both on the freight engine, were also painfully bruised in the legs and arms by jumping from their engine. Brakesman James Miller, of Montreal, was thrown through a car door when the crash came. His hand was badly cut.

HEALTH

The normal child is a slumberous animal by nature's design. If he does not sleep soundly the whole night through for eight to ten hours, he is not well and should be examined to determine the cause.

A wakeful and night-crying baby is, nine times out of ten, a badly fed baby.

deep soundly the whole night through for eight to ten hours, he is not well and should be examined to determine the cause.

A wakeful and night-crying baby is, nine times out of ten, a badly fed baby. His wakefulness and his crying are the calls for relief of a poorly digesting stomach and bowels. The food is given too often or in too great quantity, or it is of poor quality; and this may be the case when the baby is nourished in the natural way as well as when it is fed from a bottle.

In older children disturbed rest may be due to a variety of causes. Insomnia is very rare in children, but starting in the sleep, screaming, and crying with terror are not uncommon. A child who suffers from these night-terrors is not well.

It is sometimes very difficult to determine the cause, but there always is a cause, and it should be patiently hunted for until found. The search should not be limited to the child, for the fault may be that the bedclothes are too heavy, or not warm enough, or the room may be "stuffy," or sometimes it is simply too dark. The child wakes for a second, while turning over, perhaps, and finding himself surrounded by Egyptian darkness, is filled with terror and shrieks.

Indigestion may be a cause of disturbed sleep in the child as well as in the adult, and it should be remembered that this indigestion may reside in the intestine, while the stomach performs its functions with faithfulness and regularity.

One of the first signs of disease of the spine, the hip, or some other joint, is a night cry, and the possibility of some beginning trouble in the back or hip should be borne in mind.

The presence of "adenoids" interfering with a proper supply of air to the lungs may be a disturber of sleep, and it may be latent ear-disease, the night-cry of a decayed tooth, or even stasis in the bladder.

Sometimes night-terrors are a purely nervous affection like epilepsy, and sometimes they persist like a bad habit. After the existing cause has been removed or has disappeared of itself, the child who cries out in the night should not be shaken and scolded, for if the cause is nervous, this will only make the trouble worse and if there is a physical cause for the trouble it should be sought for and remedied.

NECESSITY OF REST.

Why are so many girls of to-day argled and fallow, with disfiguring little lines about the eyes and mouth, and tired, discontented-looking faces? Because they do not know how to rest, and they tax their powers of endurance to a breaking point. Girls and women who lead busy lives all the year round should make up their minds to rest for the first part of their holiday. Lie on the beach or in a hammock in the orchard, and leave your reading and sewing for a few days. Judicious resting is often more beneficial than any medicine.

CARE OF THE SKIN.

Cleanliness is the greatest essential in the care of the skin. For the cleansing bath, water as hot as can be borne is best, and a good soap should be freely applied with a moderately stiff rubber. If the water is at all hard it is well to soften it by the addition of a little ammonia or borax. A quick sparging of the entire body with cold water should follow, in order to cause the pores, relaxed by the heat to contract; and the drying should be accomplished by brisk rubbing with a coarse towel.

PREMATURE WRINKLES.

These are more often caused by illness, care, or anxiety than by the contraction due to various expressions, and a general these wrinkles can be made to disappear, when the anxieties are expelled and health restored, by careful attention to diet, cleanliness and outdoor exercise. Whatever tends to

INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.

Wash some parsley well chop it, and with it fill two small bags made of soft muslin, each about the size of a crown piece, or rather larger, and saw them up. Have a soup-plate of cold water at hand. Lay the bags, after moistening in water, upon each eye the sufferer must be lying down. When the bag grows warm, soak it for a few minutes in the water, and apply again.

TEN MILLION IN GOLD.

Steamship Carmania Brings Big Consignment of Precious Metal.

A despatch from New York says: The Cunard steamer Carmania, which arrived in port on Wednesday, may well be called a golden ship. In the strong boxes of the steamer are shipments of gold aggregating $10,000,000. This gold was imported by banks and bankers because of the recent money stringency here.

CUSTOMS DOCKS DESTROYED.

A Fire Loss of $1,200,000 at Buenos Ayres.

A despatch from Buenos Ayres says: The Customs dock, which was destroyed by fire on Wednesday, contained 30,000 tons of merchandise, mainly of German origin. The losses are estimated at $1,200,000. The origin of the conflagration is not known. Five clerks and seventy workmen have been arrested. Five firemen were injured. The dock and storehouse, erected by the Government at a cost of $400,000, were completely destroyed.

Freeman, on Tuesday, at Stockton, arrested Emma Howard, charging the theft of diamonds valued at more than $5,000 from the dead body of the wife of Henry Briggs, of Pasadena. The robbery took place Aug. 20, and up to the time of the arrest it was kept secret. The Howard woman, it is said, had not succeeded in disposing of the jewels.

ONTARIO GRAIN CROP.

Railway Estimates Place it at 107,000,000 Bushels.

A despatch from Toronto says: The grain crop of Ontario this year is still retaining its high reputation as being the premier producing province of various classes of grain in the Dominion of Canada. The grain, which is chiefly exported to other countries, will aggregate this year, according to the estimates of the G. T. R. and C. P. R., about 107,000,000 bushels. This has been one of the heaviest years in Ontario's history.

Difficult to Get Men For Militia at the Present.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Great difficulty is found in keeping up the strength of the garrison artillery at Esquimaux owing to the scarcity of recruits. The same trouble is found with the garrison artillery and infantry at Halifax. Times are so good that, even with the tempting Canadian rates of pay, men cannot be got to enlist.

1,000 LIVES LOST IN TYPHOON.

Chief Loss of Life Was Among Chinese Water Dwellers.

A despatch from Hong Kong says: The typhoon which swept this port on Tuesday, destroying a great number of vessels and causing much loss of life, was of a local nature. It came suddenly and without warning. The observatory had predicted moderate winds. Half an hour after the gun signal had been fired the storm was at its height. It lasted two hours. Most of the damage was wrought on the Kowloon Peninsula. Losses are estimated at several million dollars. Over one thousand sampans and junks are missing from Hong Kong alone. Wharves were swept away and houses collapsed. The military barracks are in ruins.

The harbor is strewn with wreckage thrown up on the shore. Hundreds of Chinese boatmen and their families were saved by the bravery of the police and civilians, but several thousand of the Chinese water-dwellers must have perished, many within short distances of the shore. The losses in lives and property among the Chinese were appalling. One launch that was capsized had 130 Chinese on board. They were all drowned.

Reports of fresh disasters are arriving every hour. Only a few Europeans are missing. No reports are on hand to show how the fishing fleets and the ships outside the harbor fared. Public opinion is incensed at the observatory for not reporting the approach of the typhoon. An enquiry has been demanded. For years past the observatory has been subjected to adverse comment, but on this occasion it is not believed to be blameable.

LATER.

A despatch from London says: Sir Matthew Nathan, Governor of Hong Kong, has sent the following cablegram to the Colonial Office:—"There is strong evidence that Bishop Hoare of Hong Kong was drowned. The loss of life among the Chinese will probably amount to about seven thousand."

The famine conditions in Russia are likely to prevail throughout the coming winter. Wheat was a good crop, but rye and oats were unsatisfactory.

Exhibition in London.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Government has been invited to participate in what will be known as a travel exhibition, to be held in Horticultural Hall, London, Eng., opening on Empire Day, May 24 next, and continuing until June 8. The originators of the project are desirous that all the British colonies should be well represented. Canada is asked to make a showing of the resources of the country, its advantages for travelers and settlers, and the mode of travelling, etc., either by means of models or striking photographs; the advantages of Canada as a resort for tourists, either in search of health or pleasure, and the easy means of reaching various points in Canada; an exhibit of products showing the inducements for intending settlers; photos or engravings showing what Canada was like, say, 50 years ago, and to-day; if possible, by models or photos, showing the old time methods that visitors or tourists employed to reach their destination, and the up-to-date methods of to-day; striking examples of the advantages given to travelers, etc., visiting the colony, and, under these headings, Canada could make an exceedingly attractive exhibit.

DECREASE IN CHEESE OUTPUT.

Curtailed Milk Supply Caused by Drought Given as Reason.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, estimates that by reason of the curtailed milk supply, caused by drought, the output of Canadian cheese will be considerably less this year than last, but enhanced price will more than make up the difference to the producer. The high prices ruling at the close of the season will, Mr. Ruddick believes, prove an incentive to greater activity next year in cheese making.

CAR OF DYNAMITE EXPLODED.

Eleven Lives Were Sacrificed and Many Injured.

A despatch from Jellico, Tenn., says: A terrific dynamite explosion on Friday caused the loss of at least eleven lives and more or less seriously injured not less than fifty persons. Property damage estimated at $1,000,000 was done, and the town of Jellico, Ky., was practically destroyed. At least five hundred persons are homeless.

SWEDISH HANDICRAFTS.

Peasants do Much Good Hand Work—Result is Few Factories.

Sweden is the home of the handicrafts in addition to manual training taught in schools, the most exquisite hand weaving, lace making, brass work, even pottery, is done by the peasants. Each district has its own patterns, which the peasants make and wear, deeming it unpatriotic to have ought to do with patterns of other localities.

Because of the handicrafts Sweden has not many textile factories, although there are some where conditions of work are, for the most part, good. The people, however, are encouraged to continue hand weaving and to hold to their time honored industrial customs rather than to take the risk of a disturbed economic order due to a market glutted with shoddy trash. In all Sweden there are to-day only about ten thousand factories of all kinds, employing in all a little more than 265,000 workmen—not a great number out of a total population of more than 5,000,000.

YOUNG FOLKS

THREE SHIPS.

Three ships there be a-sailing
Betwixt the sea and sky,
And one is Now, and one is Then,
And one is by-and-By.

The first little ship is all for you—
Its masts are gold, its sails are blue,
And this is the cargo it brings:
Joyful days with sunlight glowing,
Nights when dreams like stars are growing.

Take them, sweet, or they be going,
For they every one have wings.

The second ship is all for me—
A-sailing on a misty sea
And out across the twilight gray,
What it brought of gift and blessing
Would not stay for my caressing,
Was too dear for my possessing.
So it sails and sails away.

The last ship, riding fair and high Upon the sea, is By-and-By.
O wind, be kind and gently blow!
Not too swiftly hasten hither.
When she turns, sweet, you'll go with her—Sailing, floating, hither, thither—
Toward what port I may not know.

THE BIRTHDAY PRESENT.

"There's a lot of 'em! Nineteen, twenty, twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty—" dropping the only nickel they had upon the little pile of pennies—"seven cents. My, what a lot!" And Tommy Thompson ran his hand under the coins and let them tinkle back to the table through his opening fingers.

"An awful lot," agreed little Benny, in a hushed voice, his eyes growing big and round at the immensity of it; "and we've been an awful long time saving it, since last Christmas. An' say, Tommy," with some perturbation in his voice at the audacity of his intention, "the next cent I get I ain't goin' to save. I'm goin' to buy candy."

"So'm I," approved Tommy, promptly; "I've been thinkin' so a long time. I'm just achin' for candy. But you know what this is for, Benny. To-morrow's ma's birthday, an' we 'greed to save every cent we got till the day before, an' then buy the nicest an' biggest present we could. We'll go down to the store this evenin', after supper. It's a lot more fun to buy by 'lectric light."

"Hi! hi! there, Tommy Thompson, and Benny! Hurry out there an' play!" came a shrill voice through the window; "we can't wait all day."

"It's sheepyard they're goin' to play," cried Benny, excitedly; "I forgot to tell you. I like sheepyard better'n any game goin'." Come!

Both sprang to their feet and hurriedly gathered up the coins, replacing them in a clumsily-made cloth bag which Tommy had cut out and sewed himself. This Tommy slipped into his pocket.

But as they rushed about the room in search of their caps and then sped downstairs, Tommy failed to notice that he had not put it back into the same pocket from which it had come, but into a hole at the side of the pocket.

After supper that night they stole quietly from the house and ran all the way to the store. And it was not until they had selected the present and Tommy felt in his pocket for the money to pay for it that the loss was discovered. Then they looked at each other blankly.

"Let me feel," suggested Benny, his lips quivering; "maybe it's deep down or off to the one side, an' you missed it."

But even a thorough examination by all four hands failed to discover the little bag, and the boys turned away chokingly.

"Maybe you'll find it somewhere," said the clerk, kindly. "Anyhow, I'll hold

PARADE OF ODDFELLOWS

MOST REMARKABLE SPECTACLE EVER SEEN IN TORONTO.

Uniformed Bodies Provided Gorgeous Display—Ten Thousand Men in Line.

History records such epoch-marking spectacles as Scipio's triumph and the military procession—in the rain—in honor of the Duke and Duchess of York, but, so far as Toronto is concerned, last Wednesday's I. O. O. F. parade ranks first in the arts of peace. Before a hundred thousand citizens or more, borne by an army ten thousand strong, passed the colors and insignia of the triple link. With fluttering banners, proclaiming each individual lodge or district, fraternal regimentals that did not despise the sword, artistic conceits in color and design, the pageant wended its way along the specified route. General M. A. Raney, at the head of the Patriarchs Militant, sat on his charger with a grace possessed by no accidental horseman. A gorgeous staff surrounded him. Each man could ride, and each man was dazzling in gold, waving plume, and martial air. Many bands poured forth stirring strains. Cheering crowds acclaimed the walking host. Then, lest such admiration should produce vanity, certain religious persons carried text cards tacked on boards hoisted aloft. These passages reminded mortals of the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death, a fact that the I. O. O. F. accentuates every day in the year, though in a different way. The placard method recalled the candid subject of old that was wont to wait on the King at his banquet and tell him he was but mortal.

ALONG THE ROUTE.

The multitudes were early astir, but all citizens did not make a headlong rush. Many were prepared for a long afternoon. On King Street, just west of the King Edward Hotel, several were seated calmly at the curbstone on common-sense chairs. A stout lady nearby was obliged to stand, but she was not jostled. A brindle bulldog of determined mien squatted at her side, and even when the excitement was most intense the throng was careful to treat that live British symbol with proper respect. No label "What we have we'll hold" was needed.

On Adelaide east, near the Post-Office, a decidedly buxom woman had covered an expansive bosom with a huge collection of medals and Old Glory flaglets. An American Oddfellow, seeing the omission, threw a Union Jack over her shoulders. "Now you look more like John Bull's wife," he laughed.

Such were typical incidents of that tramp, tramp of an hour and a half. When it was all over but aching bones, a tall officer plodded painfully up Yonge Street, leading his horse on the reins. "Why don't you ride?" someone inquired. "The horse is tired," was the answer, but the joke was all in the words. The joker was too tired even to smile.

IN THE PROCESSION.

The mounted police led the way, followed by Chief Marshall James Munro and his staff, the Royal Grenadiers Band, and General Raney, with retinue. Indiana was the first State, preceded by General Stearns and mounted escort. A pony carriage contained Colonel Landes and his three-year-old son and heir, another colonel, despite his youth. Some pretty manoeuvres were seen on Spadina and Yonge, the cantons vying in excellence.

Canton Rochester was the first to introduce the Maltese cross figure. Then Cataract Canton, Niagara Falls, N.Y., did some clever work in wide formation. The Malden Ambulance Corps was accorded a pronounced ovation. Its equipment of white ambulance and staff was Fashion Hints.

THE STREET SUIT.

For any woman who loves pretty clothes the shops are absorbingly interesting just now. Every day brings to light new things. Every shopping expedition is full of surprises.

One makes up her mind what she wants in her fall and winter outfit, only to unmake it, because new revelations in materials and designs open up new possibilities, and the woman who can afford to wait is wise to do so, for the choicest models and the rarest materials and trimmings are very likely to be late season offerings.

However, there is danger, too, that the very studs one likes best will not be obtainable later, save at the hands of fashionable dressmakers and tailors who pick them up as soon as they appear, and this is particularly true of laces, passementeries, etc., so the waiting policy should not be carried to excess.

The tailored street suit may very well be ordered early, and the materials suitable for such a costume are legion. At first glance plaids and check effects seem to have the best of this province, and these materials in soft blended lines of quiet tonings and in smooth broad-cloth surfaced cloths are finding very ready sale; yet we venture to predict that the one tone costumes will late in the season be more generally admired than the plaids.

The waistcoat is apparently to be an important feature of the street costume as it was last season, although this fall one finds it often taking the form of an inconspicuous detail in velvet matching the coat material rather than in contrasting color. Checked velvet, too, is chosen for the waistcoats of some severely tailored models in plain colored woolen stuff.

A jaunty little coat and skirt costume in broad navy blue serge obtained a surprising amount of individuality from the severest of double-breasted tailored waistcoats in black and white block check velvet, its only other trimming consisting of strapping and little dark blue velvet buttons. We have seen too, a particularly knowing model in mixed brown chevrot with tailored waist coat in block check velvet of green and brown.

The checked velvets are themselves being used for delightful street costumes of somewhat dressy character, of course, and these are especially good when subdued of hue and harmony, the check combining shades of one color not greatly differing in tone or two colors which harmonize dully and softly, instead of contrasting boldly. Checked velvets and velours in shades of green, shades of brown, shades of gray in orange green and bronze brown combined or in lead gray and black are excellent, and one delightful French frock is in checked velvet of a deep rich Jacquemine red and black with girdle cravat, etc., of soft black satin.

Importers are expecting a great velvet season and a great variety of velvet materials are displayed in the better shops. Silk chiffon velvet is, of course, the most exquisite, as it is the most costly of the group; but the cotton baton chiffon velvets retain their popularity and there are various materials of the velveteen or velour class which deserve cordial praise.

A Pekin velour, for example, should find an enthusiastic welcome in this season of stripped effects. It is a phenomenally fine and supple velveteen in one tone coloring, but with a line strip introduced in the weaving at intervals.

The effect is in no way like that of the silk corduroys, and the material is very light and soft and beautiful

HORSES ARE SCARCE.

British Remount Officers Got Less Than Two Hundred.

A despatch from Montreal says: It seems that 170 horses were the most that Col. Bridge and Captain Martin, remount officers, have been able to get in Canada for shipment to South Africa. These horses will be shipped next week on the Elder-Dempster steamship Canada Cape, and will be used for trooping and gun carriages. More than a hundred of them are bronchos that were selected at Calgary. Prices paid are said to range from $175 to $200, and, as he horses had to pass a rigid inspection, it is no wonder that more were not secured, especially as horses in Canada now are selling at unusually good prices. Two hundred dollars in the West is not an unusual price for even moderately good animals.

it." But even a thorough examination by all four hands failed to discover the little bag, and the boys turned away chokingly.

"Maybe you'll find it somewhere," said the clerk, kindly. "Anyhow, I'll hold the ribbon until to-morrow night."

They were two very sober and slow-moving figures as they went back home and stole up to their room. Once inside they turned and faced each other hopelessly.

"Most six months' of savin'," groaned Tommy; "an' of course we'll never find it."

"An' all the candy we might 'a' had," sighed Benny. Then, more hopefully, "Do you s'pose if we—we prayed for it, 'twould come? You know what the teacher said Sunday."

"Yes," dreamily, "but 'tain't like this. Folks have got to work with the prayin'. But we might try. There ain't no other way."

"They dropped upon their knees, and Tommy whispered, "O Lord, please bring back ma's present!" and Benny repeated fervently, "O Lord, please bring back ma's present!" Then they arose and began to undress for bed. Then—they both saw it at the same time, lying right in the middle of the floor, where it had slipped through the hole! But Tommy and Benny always declared that the prayer went out and found it, and brought it back to them. Ten minutes later they were in the store paying the clerk for the ribbon.

FLOODS IN NEW MEXICO.

Fifty Persons Drowned and Five Hundred are Homeless.

A despatch from Guadalajara, New Mexico, on Wednesday, states that the correspondent of the Jalisco Times at Mezatlan wired his paper as follows:—"Fifty-one persons were drowned in the recent floods in Santiago, Inciuntla and adjacent districts, in the territory of Tepi. The bodies, it is stated, were taken from the river. During the flood many persons took refuge in trees, remaining there until boats were sent to their rescue. It is reported that 500 persons are homeless. Widespread damage has resulted from the inundation in Sinaloa. Several river towns have been partly destroyed, thousands of cattle drowned and crops in many sections destroyed."

DIED WITH SONG ON LIPS.

Pathetic Ending of a Little Girl Who Was Fatally Injured in Fall.

A despatch from Montreal says: Singing the song of the Breton poet, Brelot, "La Paimpolaise," the song of a fisherman who dies in sight of land and the outstretched arms of his joyous wife, little Fabiola Lajoie passed away on Wednesday. The little three-year-old girl was playing on Tuesday at home and fell 50 feet to the pavement, but an awning broke her fall, and the doctors found no external injuries. She lay in the cot in no apparent pain and sang the song to her brothers and sisters early Wednesday morning. Then came a sudden change, a few sharp cries of anguish, and it was all over.

ROBBER MADE RICH HAIL.

Secured $3,700 From Branch of Bank of Commerce at Kineston.

A despatch from Kineston, Saskatchewan, says: At 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening the Bank of Commerce was robbed in the absence of the manager. The assistant, Mr. Hickman, thought he heard a noise and came quickly down stairs, making for the safe. Immediately he was fired upon by a man in the shadow. Hickman made a plunge to grab the assailant, but received another shot, just grazing his left temple. The robber then made his escape, securing about $3,700.

Canton Rochester was the first to introduce the Maltese cross figure. Then Cataract Canton, Niagara Falls, N.Y., did some clever work in wide formation. The Malden Ambulance Corps was accorded a pronounced ovation. Its equipment of white ambulance and staff was certainly complete. The 8th Regulars' Band of Akron, Ohio, was in hussar uniform. St. Thomas Canton aroused unbounded enthusiasm. This Ontario drill team has a long list of victories to its credit. The Department of Ontario did not hesitate to show its colors—the Union Jack. The Stars and Stripes were seldom absent from the American delegation, though an occasional British flag was seen as well. Indeed, Editor E. O. Peels of Cuyahoga Lodge, Cleveland, not only waved a Jack with might and main, but thundered out the fact. His voice proved to be as long as his body. Bro. Peels and his following sang at the stops, and their choruses were pleasing to the ear.

BUFFALONIANS LOOKED WELL.

International Lodge, Buffalo, wore the garb of the Eastern shepherd, and on the float sheep were being shorn. Marine Lodge of Buffalo followed in snowy sailor suits.

There were three bands of Kilties—18th, Galt, and Hamilton. Germania Lodge of Waterloo mustered well, and pink, blue, and white blouses divided the three sections from that town. The star distinguished the veteran, and many stars were seen. Toronto did itself proud, not only in numbers, but in variety of costume. Laurel Wreath Lodge wore a wreath at breast, while Floral Lodge was noticeable in silk hat and yellow duster, with a pickaninny in front driving a team of William goats. Broadway Lodge had its name on the red flag of the Union Jack. Prospect Lodge guarded a float, on which a nurse administered to a suffering brother. Controller Ward was a carriage pedestrian, and, before the round was made, hundreds wanted to be. The review on University Avenue was a fitting finale.

JURY BLAMES AIR BRAKE.

Azilda Wreck Due to no Carelessness of Crew.

A despatch from Sudbury says: Engineers John Morris, W. Boucher, and John Beattie have been examined before the coroner's jury, and their evidence corroborates Engineer Thurlow that there was plenty of time in which to stop the train at Azilda had the air brakes been working right. The jury's verdict is as follows:

"That Thomas Puddicombe and others came to their death near the east switch at Azilda station, on the C.P.R., by train No. 1 going west and train No. 2 going east colliding at that point; that the collision was due to a defective air brake service on No. 2 train, the defect being a closed angle-cock on the rear end of the mail car. We find that the train crew took the usual precautions in handling their train."

THREE MEN KILLED.

An Explosion of Dynamite Near Fort William.

A despatch from Fort William says: Another disastrous explosion of dynamite occurred on the G.T.P. right-of-way near Fingmark, on Thursday. Three Finlanders were blown to pieces and eight others injured, one of them fatally. Foreman C. H. Hilton had his arm blown off. The injured men were taken to the hospital at Kamistiquia and the bodies brought here for burial. At the time of the accident the men were engaged in tunneling work. They returned from cover too soon, as it is said one charge went off which was followed in a few minutes by another, and the men hearing the first report came from under cover and were caught by a second charge, which did not explode with the first. The dead are: Peter Vontilinen, Henry Parviance and Nestor Johnston.

nomenally fine and supple velvet in one tone coloring, but with a line stripe introduced in the weaving at inch spaces.

The effect is in no way like that of the silk corduroys, and the material is very light and soft and beautiful in coloring. All of the popular greens, browns, wine reds, Jacqueminot reds and plum shades are represented in this velvet, and it is very good in black and in the fashionable lead and smoke grays.

FAIL COLOR COMBINATIONS.

A new early fall combination is a silk skirt with cloth jacket, reversing the order of the spring. A gray silk with black line in it is topped off with a short loose jacket of gray cloth. In this is a vest of gray suede, and the whole is trimmed with silver buttons. Just a touch of the gray silk is added to the sleeves.

Of cuffs and collars to tailor coats there is much to say. Some little odd effect is worked into nearly every velvet collar. The velvet often is laid on in the shape of a strap with oval ends. A large fancy button is set on the end both of the cuff and collar, and sometimes a cloth piece in the same shape appears under it. This is a favorite device of the tailor just now, and another is a little shaped piece of broadcloth set in the edge of the collar to lie out on the shoulders an inch or two in a plaited frill. It is pressed flat, so that in spite of the seeming unfitness it really lies as smooth as the best fitting collar.

EXPRESS PACKAGE STOLEN.

Parcel Containing $1,600 Disappears During Absence of Messenger.

A despatch from Toronto says: An express package containing $1,600, consigned by the C. P. R. Company from Owen Sound to the Bank of Montreal at Montreal, disappeared in a mysterious manner from the safe in the express car on the C.P.R. at Cardwell Junction on Wednesday morning. The package was placed in the safe by the messenger at Owen Sound. At Cardwell Junction he had occasion to leave the car to speak to the messenger, on an upbound train. Mr. Kelly, produce dealer, of Parkdale, who was riding on the express car, had previously alighted from the train when it stopped. The messenger was not gone more than three or four minutes. Mr. Kelly reaching the car first. While the train was backing out on to the main line the messenger discovered that the package and money were gone. He signaled the train to stop, and reported the loss to the conductor, but no trace of the money has been discovered. Mr. Kelly, in view of all the circumstances, insisted on being searched.

CANADA-MEXICO LINE.

Bach Government Promises Subsidy of $68,000 to Aid Venture.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Capt. Worsnop, representing the English firm with which the Mexican Government has signed a conditional contract for the direct steamship line to ply on the Pacific between Canadian and Mexican ports, has arrived in the city to obtain the signature of the Minister of Trade and Commerce to the same contract. The Government is already committed to the arrangement, so that there probably will be no delay in arranging for the immediate inauguration of the service. The terms of the contract are that the Governments of Canada and Mexico will each contribute an annual subsidy of $68,000, in consideration of which the company will maintain a monthly service between the Canadian ports of Victoria and Vancouver and the Mexican ports of Manzanillo, Acapulco, and Salina Cruz. Meantime, the subsidized Canada-Mexico line on the Atlantic is doing an excellent freight business.

THE OPENINGS.

DOXSEE & CO

A wealth of beauty and elegance in millinery and superb fall goods generally marked the display of the Doxsee Co, at their fall millinery opening, which commenced Saturday Sept 22nd. The display was striking, and many innovations and changes in the fall styles for 1906. Noticeable in which is a predominance of light colors and smart effects making the styles for the autumn bright and attractive. Our attention was drawn to a very pretty hat the Gainsborough in Burgundy silk brim with velvet and plums in same shades. Another very handsome and dainty little suit hat, called the Rob-Roy in Tan felt trimmed around the brim with folds of brown velvet caught on left side with vulture feathers, one on the melvin shape which was very much admired, made in felt and trimmed with Luella and velvet in the taupe shade and finished with a pale blue feather.

The leading shades are Taupe, Burgundy, Sapphire Blue, Ruse, Tan and Pearl Grey. A few of the new and popular shapes are Rob-Roy, Helmet, Mushroom, Vesta Tilly, Victorine, Vesta, Regna, Scotch Turban and the jockey hat.

Feathers promise to be very popular trimming for winter hats, also breasts wings, cocks features, Osprey, last but not least, velvet roses and foliage combined with grapes.

MADILL BROS.

Many notable openings have been calendared, but the Fall Openings of Messrs. Madill Bros., which was held on Saturday evening last, stands out pre-eminent. This notable establishment was the scene of an imposing and dignified display, which set an authoritative and definitive seal on the season's modes. Filled with the richest and most exclusive importations the aristocratic store was the rendezvous of the fashionable elect. The Dress Goods and Silk Department was exquisitely arrayed with Fabrics of the most fashionable nature so carefully arranged, that each and every piece was appreciated by all. The Linen Department was one of elegance, the showing of the Real Irish Linens (Shamrock Brand) and Tenneriffe Drawn Work, the prestige accorded this department this season denotes the exhibit, and demand for the finest qualities of Linens known to be stocked by this reliable firm. The Ready-to-Wear Department, the department which is so prominent this season on account of the arrivals of the New York Garments—the Ladies' Coats, being very much in evidence, which are of the most fashionable nature, the Dress Skirts, the Silk and Lace Waists were also shown to good advantage. The Smallware Department as usual was a centre of attraction, with its extensive glass show counters arranged so that the many, many lines covered in this modern department could be seen to good advantage. The Carpet, Housefurnishing and Fur departments were very elaborate in their form of display. The Carpets, Rugs, and Curtains were arranged by a talented artist and shown to excellent advantage, the Furs as usual cause a commotion amongst the Lady Patrons on account of the High class nature of stock carried by this firm. Many more comments could be made in detail of the display but the choice quality and select character instinctively enthrall those who are quick to recognize the cachet of exclusive elegance.

After two years and a half continuous work the eastbound and westbound shields in one of the 23-foot twin tubes which the Pennsylvania Railroad has been driving under the Hudson River to connect New York and New Jersey have met. Now men may walk through dry shod from one state to another. The second tube, a few feet to the south, is expected to join about the 7th of Oct. The meeting of the shields marks the beginning of the completion of one of the most astonishing engineering feats on record. Probably no feat of railway strategy in the history of the United States has attracted more attention throughout the world than this one. Its completion will mark a triumph over difficulties of tremendous magnitude, as this will be the longest tunnel ever bored entirely under water—Chas. J. Crowley, C. E., is engineer, and his tunnel is pronounced the finest and best in the world to-day. Mr. Crowley is a Canadian, and his wife was Miss Haydon, daughter of Mr. J. S. Haydon, one of the most successful and highly respected business men of Camden East.

ROBERT DENISON.

One of Napanee's best known and most highly respected residents passed away on Saturday last in the person of Robert Denison, at the age of 84 years 11 months and 28 days. Deceased had been a resident of Napanee for thirty years, and during twenty-six years of that period, conducted a grocery and provision store. Previous to coming to Napanee, Mr. Denison conducted a farm, as a gentleman farmer, and a wood yard. He was also overseer for a number of years of the Selby road, when that road was owned by a private corporation. In politics, Mr. Denison was a staunch Liberal and during his political career was several times reeve of Richmond, and served a term as Warden of the County of Lennox and Addington. In religion he was a Methodist and a staunch supporter of the Western Methodist church, and a very liberal subscriber to that church. Deceased had been ailing for some time but was seriously ill but a few weeks. The funeral took place on Monday from the Western Methodist Church, the church being beautifully draped for the occasion.

The Perverse Golf Ball.

A collector of evidence on the subject maintains learnedly that the golf ball is the most perverse of human institutions. Here is a list of strange lies noted by a follower of the ancient game: In another player's pocket, where it had dropped after traveling 200 yards; in a cow's mouth; on the roof of a clubhouse; behind the glass protecting a painting hanging on a cottage wall; in a clump of daisies, which it so resembled that it was not found for an hour. When it fell in the cow's mouth the frightened animal galloped 276 yards nearer the hole and then restored the ball to its owner. He promptly claimed to have driven it 397 yards and the right to play it from where it lay.

An Ancient English Workhouse.

In the records of St. Thomas hospital, London, is an entry of the year 1570 to the effect that "in consideration of the hote tyme of the yere" the poor be allowed "every one a day three pynnts of Bere for two months," a quart at dinner and a pint at supper, and at the end of two months return to "there olde ordinary allowance, wyche is one quart." The food at this ancient workhouse was to be dealt with as liberally as the drink. The almoner and steward were to "bye no byffe but of the best, without bones and in speciall without the marybon, and none other to be bowght."

Professional Dignity.

"What wages do you expect?" asked Mrs. Randolph of Aunt Phronie, who had come to hire as cook.

"Well, Ah tell you. Ef Ah cooks an' waits on de table, too, Ah 'spects $2 eberv week Ah lives, b-u-t ef yo' all has family reach at de table an' Ah jes' hab ter cook, den Ah charges er dollar an' fo' bits."
